WLB Orders Steel Pay Raise of 44c; President May Seek Wage Curb

Administration Faces Major Crisis in Stabilization Fight As Labor Stiffens

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Administration came face to face with a major crisis with organized labor over its wage stabilization program yesterday as the War Labor Board ordered the wages of 157,000 "little steel" workers increased 44 cents a day instead of the full $1 a day boost demanded by the C. I. O. United Steel Workers of America.

Almost simultaneously, Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chairman, acted to recall to Washington for further instructions the Government's representatives at WPB's West Coast aircraft wage stabilization conference, it was learned. Nelson acted to avert an imminent collapse of the parley because of labor's opposition to wage stabilization proposals advanced by the Office of Price Administration.

Both developments made it crystal clear that the Administration's "working alliance" with organized labor was threatened by governmental efforts to check wages as part of the President's seven-point program to keep down the cost of living.

The decision to reduce the steel union's demands by 56 cents was made yesterday by WLB over the protests of its four labor members, who voted against the ruling.

Text to Be Released Today

WLB withheld formal announcement of its decision, to give the board majority a chance to complete a formal opinion explaining its stand. The text of the opinion is expected to be released late this afternoon. It is understood that the labor members will voice their protest against WLB's ruling in an accompanying dissenting opinion.

The decision affected the four "little steel" companies—Inland, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Republic and Bethlehem. The wage adjustment was expected to be extended to approximately 500,000 other steel workers employed by "big steel"—the United States Steel Corporation and its many subsidiaries. The increase, in accordance with a previous board order, will be made retroactive to the dates of certification—meaning that the steel workers will receive five months of back increase.

Panel Had Supported Union

Philip Murray, president of both the C. I. O. and the Steel Workers Union, declined to comment on the WLB's action yesterday when he was reached in Pittsburgh by an Associated Press reporter. However, he indicated that the union might not accept the decision. He recalled a rail case in the Middle West where the operator had refused to accept the WLB's decision. In that case an understanding was later worked out between the two parties directly, he said.

Earlier during a recess in a meeting of his union's "Little Steel" policy committee, Murray said it was planned to submit the question of accepting the board's decision to a referendum of union members "in event our wage demands are not

Roosevelt Reported Demanding Early Action to Stifle Increases

Control of wages and all other major factors in costs to prevent a general break-through in Price Control Administrator Leon Henderson's price ceilings yesterday was reported seriously under consideration by the President.

Mr. Roosevelt discussed the subject with his congressional leaders at a recent legislative conference. He put Congress informally on notice that it might be necessary for members to forgo their midsummer recess to consider further overall anti-inflation measures.

No definite decisions have been reached, it was emphasized, but the President was reported leaning heavily toward action clamping down on runaway wage increases, paralleling the Administration's firm stand against an unrestricted rise in farm prices.

Wage controls were entirely omitted from the original Price Control Act, while the Administration sought to "stabilize" labor costs through machinery of the War Labor Board.

In one quarter the President was reported to feel that the War Labor Board through its rulings would eventually achieve stabilization objectives, but implied doubts as to whether this could be done quickly enough to preserve the war price structure.

Congress for some time has been anticipating a Presidential crackdown on inflationary factors not checked by his seven-point program but expected the move in the fall, possibly after the November elections.

Meanwhile it had proceeded with plans for a recess of from four to six weeks, immediately following House passage of the tax bill.

House Passes Farm Bill in Vote Reversal

Pressure of Leaders Forces Agreement On Sales of Grains Below Parity Price

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration yesterday won a double-barreled victory over divided Congressional farm blocs as the House broke its farm bill deadlock and the Senate reaffirmed existing controls over processed farm commodities.

Collapse of the House fight on Administration powers to sell Government-owned grain below parity to feed livestock came in a dramatic reversal of six previous House votes against subparity release of surplus wheat.

The three-month stalemate ended following a telephoned appeal to leaders from the White House and blunt notice that the so-called House compromise, permitting sale of Government wheat at corn parity, would collide with a veto.

After a feverish canvass for votes by the leadership, the House rejected the unacceptable compromise, 204 to 128. A move to insist further on the original House stand against release of any grain for feed below parity was likewise rejected, by a 134 to 71 standing vote.

Bill Goes to President

The fight over, Chairman Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the House farm bill managers, moved to concur in the Senate grain provisions supported by the Administration. These were accepted, 171 to 57.

The bill, which 24 hours before appeared headed into another long dog-fight, was sent to the Senate, where final passage was voted. Last night the bill was on the President's desk, his battle won except for minor earlier reverses on the farm security appropriations.

It was a personal victory for Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate conferees, as well as for the Administration. Through months of conference battling Senator Russell had refused to budge on grain provisions of the Senate bill, which the President called "minimum."

Farm Bloc Divided

These will permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to sell corn and 125 million bushels of wheat at 85 per cent of corn parity, for feed to swell livestock supplies in the President's "food for victory" program.

In addition, the Government could sell unrestricted supplies of its loan

Nazi Drive Nears Stalingrad As 2 More Vital Towns Fall; British Open Push in Egypt

Sudden Offensive Takes Prisoners; Australians Hold Positions on Coast

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, July 15.—British troops striking suddenly in the central sector of the El Alamein battleground captured an "appreciable" number of prisoners in a sharp offensive tonight while Australians on the coastal road were throwing back a strong attempt by Marshal Rommel to regain lost ground.

A considerable amount of British armor was known to have been massed in this central sector of the desert battleground some 80 miles west of Alexandria.

The British hit the Axis in the center while Rommel was fiercely engaged on the coast road. Attacks in other sectors also were thrown back.

The R. A. F. was increasingly active, fighter bombers and light bombers scoring many direct hits on tanks.

The pilot of one light bomber who destroyed an enemy tank said he saw it "turn inside out."

The new Nazi effort to retake the desert coastal ridge 5 miles west of El Alamein began with a sundown attack by motorized infantry and tanks yesterday, wore on through the night and continued until it was beaten off this evening.

After being repulsed in a daylight attack Monday with considerable losses, Rommel apparently decided to try his luck on the night side, still trying to dislodge the Allies from Tel El Eisa—the Hill of Jesus—which was taken by Australian troops last Friday in the first half of a 10-mile imperial advance west of El Alamein.

It was the third Axis attack so far on the heights.

In one swoop the R. A. F. destroyed all but one vehicle in a desert convoy of 15 armored cars and transports and one tank, besides taking the customary toll of Axis aircraft.

The R. A. F. also attacked the port of Tobruk in force, starting fires that eventually blended into one great conflagration.

Soviet Troops Fight Off Effort To Trap Them in Voronezh Area

Moscow (Thursday), July 16. Two German columns driving in separate sectors toward the steel city of Stalingrad have forced Russian troops to evacuate the towns of Boguchar, on the Don River (190 miles west of Stalingrad), and Millerovo, on the Moscow-Rostov railway supply line and only 175 miles from Stalingrad, the Russian high command reported early today.

On the northern limits of the battlefront, Soviet troops fought off a renewed series of German attacks against Voronezh, the midnight communique said.

"In a number of sectors our troops are repelling the attacking enemy with counterblows and inflicting heavy losses on him," the communique said.

There were no material changes in other sectors of the long fighting line.

The official Russian press meanwhile warned that the "menace is great" on the approaches of the Caucasus.

Ferocity Increases

Fighting in the Voronezh area is "developing with increased ferocity," the Russians said. "A number of fortified positions have changed hands several times."

Several German reserve divisions have been rushed eastward from France and Belgium, the midday communique said, to fill the gaps in the Russian front caused by tremendous Nazi casualties.

This communique said that at Voronezh, where the Germans made their first great plunge southeastward nearly two weeks ago, eleventh-hour counterattacks on the south side of the city pushed the Germans back to the point where they crossed the Don. The communique added that on the north approaches the Russians stopped the upper arm of an encircling movement, then threw the attackers into retreat.

The Germans had attempted the encirclement after their breakthrough west of the city, accomplished by large numbers of fresh troops and hundreds of tanks followed by automatic riflemen, had run into stubborn Red army resistance.

Rail Crossing Recaptured

One important position west of Voronezh, together with a forest, was reported recaptured in the Russian counterattacks. Russian dispatches said also that the Third German motorized infantry division, which appeared on the battlefield only yesterday, had been forced to withdraw and was replaced by the new 168th motorized division.

A small railway crossing also was retaken and in another sector the Russians applied such pressure that the Germans retired, blowing up a bridge.

German dive bombers in small groups were hammering repeatedly at the Red army formations, but Red air force again was showing considerable strength both over the Don battlefield and the Don River crossings forced by the Germans.

Northwest of Voronezh, a number of German tanks were reported destroyed on the west bank of the Don by strong Russian armored forces.

There was no news from the region east of Lisichansk, some 135 miles southwest of Boguchar, or from the Rzhev front northwest of Moscow—both areas of powerful German offensive action.

Southeast of Leningrad, in the Volkhov sector, the Germans were reported driven from a fortified village they had occupied since last fall.

Russian bombers, raiding an unidentified enemy port, were credited with destroying five warehouses, sinking a transport and a tanker and starting big fires.

War Contracts Net Trio $3450 Daily in Fees

"Making Too Much," "Salesmen" Admit; Probers Amazed

By the Associated Press

The House Naval Affairs Committee was informed yesterday that three self-styled "sales engineers" stood to garner commissions on millions of dollars of Government war work in a plant which the Government itself built.

The disclosure, drawing expressions of amazement and concern from committee members, came from J. B. Decker, vice president and general manager of the Triumph Explosive Co. at Elkton, Md., where the Government spent four million dollars to supplement the company's facilities with factories of its own.

D. C. Firm Has Contract

Decker testified that Triumph, which operated the Government plant as well as its own, had a contract with the Washington sales engineering company of Shirley, Olcott and Nichols entitling the latter to 1 per cent of the amount of Navy work secured for the Government-owned plant.

[F. B. Olcott, one of the partners told The Post last night that the three realized "we have been making too much money" and for more than a year have been renegotiating contracts with their clients to curtail profits.—Editor's note.]

$14,000,000 Business

Decker said that Triumph now held war contracts for work to be performed in the Government factories amounting to approximately 24 million dollars and that, "on the book value" of its contract with Shirley, Olcott and Nichols, the Washington firm would receive about $256,000 in commissions.

He reported that the Washington company received a 2½ per cent commission on contracts awarded for performance in the plants which Triumph itself owns and estimated that business amounted to approxi-

Tires Assured If Care Is Used, Country Told

But Pleasure Driving Must Go, Jesse Jones And Farish Warn U. S.

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The American motorist heard good news yesterday—the best he has heard since the fall of Singapore—as leaders of Government and business agreed that the Nation's automobiles can be kept rolling on rubber, but only if present tires are given scrupulous care and if pleasure driving is eliminated.

At the same time another team of Government and industry spokesmen for rubber manufacturers and the War Production Board, exhibited deep concern over published reports labeling the rubber-for-automobile shortage as a myth.

200,000 Tons Coming

The bearers of good tydings for motorists were Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and William S. Farish, president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. This was the news they brought:

Farish—Entirely apart from the Government's synthetic rubber program and without building expensive new plants, the oil industry may be able to produce 200,000 tons of two somewhat inferior types of synthetic by the end of 1943 by utilizing "makeshift" equipment thrown together, mainly, from "spare parts and junk." One type of rubber, Flexan, from which low-speed tires already have been made, could be brought into production by November. The whole program hinges on the willingness of Government to help finance processes which "makeshift" equipment makes expensive.

Jones—"The rubber industry . . . indicates that with a minimum amount of natural rubber and a modest amount of scrap, Senator Josh Lee won renomination and Robert S. Kerr became the Democratic candidate for Governor of Oklahoma in that State's Tuesday primaries, late returns showed yesterday.

However, House Roads Committee Chairman Cartwright was 1308 votes behind Paul Stewart in his renomination race, with only 15 precincts out. The other five Democratic House members with opposition apparently were successful.

The Senate yesterday voted 124 million dollars for OPA, five million more than was recommended by appropriations committee and millions more than was approved by the House.

American Heroes' Day

'Retailers for Victory' Drive Approved by Commissioners

District Commissioners yesterday put their stamp of approval on the big "Retailers for Victory" rally tomorrow on the steps of the District Building, opposite Post Square, at 1 p. m., featuring local celebration of American Heroes' Day.

In addition, two Army nurses who escaped from the battles of Bataan and Corregidor, and film star Loretta Young will be the headliners of a broadcast honoring heroines of both the first and second World Wars over the Blue network via Station WMAL from 3 to 3:30 tomorrow afternoon.

The District Commissioners have given enthusiastic approval to the rally and have assisted in making advance arrangements for the celebration.

"We have noted with interest the progress of the 'Retailers for Victory' drive and we desire to contribute in all possible ways to its success," Commissioner John Russell Young said yesterday. "The rally tomorrow has been arranged as one of the high points of that drive for the purpose of stimulating the purchase of war bonds and stamps through our retail stores. We congratulate the merchants on the splendid progress they have made and we look forward confidently to the success of this month's campaign which has as its objective a major contribution to the sale of one billion dollars in war bonds nationally."

The District department of the American Legion will have its color guard on duty and a number of members who have been decorated for distinguished service will be present in uniform. The program will be broadcast by Station WJSV.

Yanks in Ireland

Following his trip to training camps in this country, Marshall Andrews was sent by The Post to Ireland to see our troops in the final phase of preparation. The next step will be facing the enemy. They will be as well trained as soldiers can be.

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Northern Ireland, July 15.—Men of the old Tank Corps who came over here 24 years ago to fight in whippet tanks borrowed from the French should see what America has sent now to take up their banners where they laid them down.

In place of those little thin-walled Renaults, which crept into battle at 8 miles an hour, the armored force of the 1942 A. E. F. has light and medium tanks of tremendous speed and firepower, heavily armored and immensely powerful. They have with them their own engineers, their own reconnaissance force and repair and service troops to keep them going and supplied with fuel.

ANDREWS

The armored force training here now is not just an aggregation of tanks and men to run them. It is a force organized to fight the way battles are fought today, with the power to make its own breaks and the stamina to take advantage of them.

You have met these hardy and handy young men before. You saw them training as gunners on the wobble plates at their post in the United States; you saw them making trucks and motorcycles out of wrecks, there to learn to repair and operate them; you saw them firing on the ranges.

That is all behind them now; they have come into a strange country, just a step from the place where their kind of fighting was bred, to put their knowledge together, to perfect it, to make of themselves a team invincible through confidence in their own strength.

They are tough, these lads of the armored force. They look tough, they talk tough, they fight tough and they carry themselves with a swagger, chips on their shoulders and steel in their hard brown hands.

"Fittest looking lot we've seen," say admiring British soldiers.

"Their fathers must have been Irish," natives remark, watching them clatter along the hard black roads.

They have got everything their predecessors of 1918 had, all their faith in themselves, their bold forthrightness, their reck-

Debate Will Start Today; Final Vote Slated for Monday

A $6,144,000,000 tax bill, dipping deeply into the pocketbooks of more than 30 million taxpayers and exacting unprecedented war levies from corporations, yesterday was cleared by the House Rules Committee.

Under a so-called "gag" rule, barring any tax amendments not previously approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, the bill will be called up for debate in the House today and go to a final vote Monday.

While no tax amendments were permitted under the proposed closed rule, the House was granted one chance to make changes in the measure in a motion to recommit preceding the passage vote.

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, who filed the lone minority report against the measure because of alleged "ruinous" taxes on small corporations, immediately announced he would offer the motion to return the bill to committee for corporate rate

Suspicions Aroused By 'Clam Diggers' In Area Devoid of Clams

The story of how a young Coast Guardsman spotted three Nazi saboteurs who landed on the beach at Amagansett, Long Island, and sounded the alarm that led to their eventual capture was made public yesterday by Elmer Davis' Office of War Information.

It told how John C. Cullen, 21-year-old seaman, second class, U. S. C. G., played dumb and accepted a bribe from one of the Nazis "to forget the whole thing."

It told, too, how Cullen was afraid at one point that the Nazi leader was trying to hypnotize him when he said, "Now look me in the eyes."

In the end, Seaman Cullen discovered that the Nazi, in giving him a supposed $300 bribe, "shortchanged" him $40.

Secrecy Rules Not Violated

In making public the story, the Office of War Information explained that the details came from the official files of the Coast Guard.

"The information," OWI said, "was assembled before the start of the present trial of the saboteurs and hence does not violate the rule of secrecy imposed by Maj Gen. Frank R. McCoy, president of the special military commission conducting the trial."

The official account follows:

On the night of the landing, Cullen left his station at midnight for

'Valuable Cargo' Lost

4 More Ships Sunk by U-Boats; Nazis Knew Ports, Routes of 2

By the Associated Press

Twenty-one seamen were killed and four Navy gunners were reported missing in enemy submarine attacks on four more Allied merchant ships in the Atlantic but 459 passengers and crew were rescued, the Navy's announcements of the sinkings disclosed yesterday.

The ships included two United States merchant vessels, a large British merchant vessel, and a medium-sized Norwegian cargo carrier, boosting the unofficial Associated Press tabulation of Allied and neutral ship losses in the Atlantic area to 374.

Carrying 381 passengers and crew, one of the American merchantmen was torpedoed and sunk June 30, several hundred miles off the Atlantic coast. Only nine men were lost despite a four-minute sinking. Chief Officer Keon Francis Hart said there was no greater loss of life because the crew had been carefully trained.

Three women were among the survivors rescued by naval craft. Fifty-one of those saved were injured, a few seriously.

The second United States vessel was the victim of a bold daylight U-boat attack in the Caribbean July 1. The vessel's skipper, Capt. William R. McDonough of Mobile, Ala., expressed belief that "the crew of the submarine knew we carried a valuable cargo, and our destination and route were known to them."

Navy gunners aboard the ship managed to fire four shells at the raider's periscope, but without apparent results. Three crewmen were lost and four of the 14-man gun crew were reported missing. Forty-nine others in lifeboats were picked

Fearsome Night Conflict Waged in Desert on Edge of Qattara Depression

Eye-Witness Tells of Fierce Africa Battle

By Richard D. McMillan
United Press Staff Writer

With British Forces, El Alamein Front, July 14 (delayed).—German tanks are spouting flaming death through this desert night and the flashes of mighty 75, 88 and 105-millimeter guns are lighting up the horizon from the sea to the edge of the Qattara Depression 35 miles south.

It is Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's supreme bid to slice off the British Tel El Eisa sector on the coast and a more spectacular battle was never fought.

Earlier in the day the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses in killed, founded and prisoners. Then, just as dusk settled, the Nazi Africa Corps attacked again in great force

Tracers Stab Night

Its war machines make a fearsome picture as they storm the British key points on Hammer Hill, laying down a barrage for supporting infantry whose progress can be followed by streams of tracer bullets stabbing into the night.

Green and white signal flares from the tanks and shock troops are weaving a brilliant pattern in the moonless sky. High explosive shells crack and shine for a moment like diamonds, then hurtle into the parched earth, throwing up bowlfuls of fire like ladles in a blast furnace

I drove to the front line through the curling smoke from British cannon shortly after Rommel attacked, choosing the moment when the last rays of the setting sun blinded the British. The enemy artillery opened a tumultuous cannonade, far greater than the usual nightly barrage.

British reconnaissance learned that heavy German concentrations were moving up, Rommel again using his own forces rather than trusting the Italians to deliver the assault.

British Reply

The roar of battle reached a mighty crescendo as British batteries answered the enemy fire.

The British guns are massed as I have rarely seen them in this campaign. British aircraft hang flares like lanterns over the battle-wracked desert.

Rommel, blocked on all sides in his attempts to break through and his every ruse checkmated, has brought up fresh shock troops by transport from Crete to launch this grim drive.

The flashes of the guns were so bright that they lit up the interior of our car and clearly revealed British tanks and guns moving to the forward area.

I talked with tank crews as they stopped for a quick cigarette before going into battle. They said the enemy was advancing with tanks, each of which had its own complement of infantry following close behind.

As I write this dispatch the enemy assault appears to be wavering before the British stonewall defense, which is proving too tough even for Rommel's elite forces.

Weave Like Boxers

In earlier assaults on the El Alamein front, German tanks, weaving like boxers, raced in to attack the British lines, but always the British artillery slipped under their guard.

Even smoke screens fail to protect them, so thoroughly do the British big guns range the battlefield.

In one of these typical assaults, a tank column split into two sections and stormed the southwest corner of the British El Alamein defenses. They moved to within two or three hundred yards of the barbed-wire line covered by smoke and the brisk fire of German 88-millimeter guns, then the British artillery nailed them.

The tanks scurried for cover like giant cockroaches and every member of the following sapper party who ventured close to the wire was killed.

The Germans attacked again, and the British guns still held off their armored power while Bren guns and rifles mowed down the enemy afoot.

Search for Sappers

This battle lasted all day Monday and into the velvety dusk. At 2 a. m. Tuesday British patrols went out to inspect no-man's land, suspecting that some sappers might have approached the British lines and kept low to do their work after dark. But they found only small pockets of the enemy, who were scattered by Tommygun fusillades.

On the southern sector of the El Alamein front a fairly strong enemy column has been roaming in plain sight of the British front lines, apparently for show—to keep Imperial forces diverted three.

The Italians hold the main Axis line in the north coast sector but all attacks are carried out by the Germans, who were drafted especially for assault tasks.

Battleship Completed

London, July 15 (AP).—Official British circles said today the Italians possibly had completed the 35,000-ton battleship Roma, on which work was started June 12, 1940, but it was very doubtful that a sister ship, the Impero, was in commission.

A Stockholm dispatch said both vessels had joined the Italian Mediterranean fleet. The British circles said this report might have been planted by the Germans.

Sidelights on the War

Churchill Bans Cargo Space For Gifts to British Citizens

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), July 16.—In a letter to President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill asked today that the flow of individual gifts and supplies from the United States to British citizens be diminished to save shipping space for war materials.

To this end the foreign office announced that hereafter cargo space would be allocated only to direct consignments through the American Red Cross to the British Red Cross and Women's Voluntary Services, and through the British War Relief Society to the Personal Service League.

Organizations wishing to make a request to the United States for some specified gift to meet a special need may apply to the American gifts committee for authorization of the shipping space required.

The abrupt halt of what Churchill called "the brotherly flow of materials" to individuals and unauthorized groups represents another notch in the tightening of the British belt.

It will not necessarily mean hardship, however, since the principal effect will be on shipments of luxuries and nonessential supplies which formerly supplemented the food and clothing rations of many of the British people.

For some time it has been illegal for individual unauthorized groups to request supply shipments from the United States, but many individuals and numerous Americans living in Britain have been receiving packages of tobacco, clothing and delicacies which are unobtainable in England.

Spitfires Rake French Coast, Blast Nazi Camps, Gun Posts

By the Associated Press

London, July 15.—Two hundred daring Spitfire fighters flying only a few feet above the ground shot up 200 miles of the French coast in a low-level attack today, blasting camps and gun posts and scattering German troops "all over the countryside."

A squadron of Fighting French airmen played a leading role in the attack, the Air Ministry news service said tonight, sweeping over the cliffs at Fecamp to attack light anti-aircraft field artillery batteries, wireless stations, freight cars and troops.

The fighters sped to the attack when fine weather returned today and strong formations of planes roared over the Channel.

Four offensive operations were reported, centering on the Etaples area, across the Channel from England, and over Fecamp, St. Valerie-en-Caux, and Dieppe.

The news service said gas works at St. Valerie-en-Caux were "set alight."

In another operation, a 500-ton coaster towing a target for German antiaircraft batteries was sunk by Spitfires off the Dutch coast, the ministry added.

up in six hours.

The British merchantman was torpedoed 1500 miles off the Atlantic Coast. Survivors were landed at an Eastern port.

The survivors included 77 crewmen and 20 passengers. Three seamen were killed when the torpedo struck, three others were lost in abandoning ship and two died in lifeboats from injuries.

One lifeboat carried 47 persons and the other 52. Both groups were picked up after drifting four days.

Survivors of the Norwegian vessel presented evidence that Axis U-boat commanders have advance information on merchant ship movements. They related that following the sinking the submarine officer halted their lifeboats, asked the ship's name, nationality and tonnage, then correctly recited the name of the port from which they had sailed and their destination.

One seaman was killed in the attack, staged May 17, but 31 others were rescued. Survivors said that two submarines may have participated.

Meanwhile the torpedoing of the 7000-ton British freighter Cortona off Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, last Monday was disclosed in a dispatch from Rio de Janeiro, quoting advices from the Brazilian port of Fortaleza. Additional details were not available.

It's Freedom Or Nothing, Gandhi Asserts

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wardha, India, July 14 (Delayed). Mohandas K. Gandhi supplemented the new All-India congress party resolution demanding Britain's withdrawal from rule of India with the emphatic declaration today that there can be no further negotiation.

Gandhi conceded to reporters that violence might result from the resolution.

"I don't want rioting or anything of that sort as a direct result of these measures," Gandhi declared. "If rioting takes place I shall feel helpless."

The resolution must be ratified by the All-India Congress Committee, which has been called to meet at Bombay, August 8, but never in the history of the party has an important decision of the 15-man working committee been overruled by the 350 members of the general committee.

Asked whether he expected the British to "come to terms," Gandhi replied that "they are human beings and I am never in despair of making an upward growth."

It was stated that the resolution does not intend that the British be banished physically from Indian territory, that the United Nations be handicapped in fighting the Axis or that the way be paved for aggression against India.

Gandhi said that the movement, led by him and backed by the congress, would be "a mass movement of the widest possible scale," but that he was not courting imprisonment—"that is too soft."

"If I am dragged into jail," he said, "it is difficult to know what may happen. I can fast. I have before. But I hope to avoid such steps."

After a grant of independence, Gandhi declared, "all things are possible . . . If Britain withdraws in perfect good will the change will be effected without the slightest disturbance. Wise men will come together, incredible as it may seem, to form a creditable government."

Foul Blows Foul No More; This Is War

By the Associated Press

New York, July 15.—Those polite lads from Hell's Kitchen and Port Said may now push over—those who are left at least—for their gouging, knee raising and knife wielding is strictly Marquis of Queensberry.

The new champion of "Get Him Before He Gets You" displayed his wares here. And even top sergeants winced!

He is Maj. W. E. Fairbairn, trainer of the British commandos, on loan to the United States to show the American soldier, sailor and marine how to treat the Axis.

Major Fairbairn, mild looking and mild talking British veteran of 57 years, explained his method to an audience made up of every branch of the service as he tossed big strapping exponents of judo (jiu-jitsu) about the Hotel Astor's College Room.

Before he got through the post-prandial exercises, the same room looked like a picnic of the Donneybrook Chowder and Marching Society. Usually correct majors from the air forces were practicing on lieutenant commanders from the Navy, ensigns were tossing chief petty officers about (and vice versa) and civilians who've been found wanting physically, insofar as Army service is concerned, were using uniformed men as aerial torpedoes.

What in Major Fairbairn's method? It's a college degree jiu-jitsu, it's magna cum laude Hell's Kitchen; post graduate Port Said mixed with war sense.

Fairbairn has made a study of every method of close combat. He was the first foreigner ever admitted to the Kodokan Jiu-jitsu University in Tokyo where he was awarded the black belt, first and second degree. He commanded the Shanghai police and drove terrorists from the city. Now he's teaching his method to the United Nation troops.

"There will be those of you who will be shocked by my methods," Major Fairbairn explained. "To you I say in war you cannot afford the luxury of squeamishness. Either you kill or capture or you will be killed or captured."

Another Long Shot

22 AVG Men To Maintain China Lifeline

By Walter L. Briggs
United Press Staff Writer

Calcutta, July 15.—Members of the American Volunteer Group had such a good time fighting the Japs in Burma and China against terrific odds that 22 of them now are going to take a fling at another long-shot venture.

They are joining the China National Aviation Corporation, whose pilots for years have been flying the toughest commercial airline route in the world over high mountains and treacherous jungles where emergency landing fields are few and far between.

These days the C. N. A. C. fliers face the additional risk of being attacked by Jap fighter planes as they roar over enemy-occupied areas to keep open the lifeline to China.

When the A. V. G. was made part of the U. S. Army Air Force on July 4, some of its members decided not to make the transfer.

Seven of them are now here, being instructed in the operation of huge transport planes. One of them who has made his first flight as a co-pilot is tall, blond Ericksen E. Shilling, 26, of Washington, D. C.

Seven others have returned to the United States for short vacations before returning here. Eight others still in China will join the C. N. A. C. in about two weeks.

I was at the airfield this morning watching the seven fighter plane experts take the controls of giant, twin-engined transports for the first time in their lives. Eventually the Americans will become first pilots with Chinese as their copilots.

Charles Sharp, middle-aged operations manager of C. N. A. C. said:

"We are looking for every good pilot we can get. It's hard to get them, what with the Army grabbing 'em off."

The other six Americans taking their training are:

F. W. Adkins, 24, Miami Beach, Fla.; R. P. (Duke) Hedman, 24, Webster City, S. D.; Robert Moss, 24, Doerun, Ga.; Clifford Groh, 23, Chicago; C. H. Link, Kansas City, Mo., and Fred C. Hodges, 26, Memphis, Tenn.

Shilling is Graduate Of Eastern High

Ericksen E. Shilling, a graduate of Eastern High School and Emerson Institute here, finished the Army Air Corps advanced flying course at Kelly Field, Tex., October 5, 1938, and was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned to a pursuit squadron. He is the son of Eric K. Shilling, 301 Anacostia Road Northeast, himself an officer in the Air Corps Reserve.

SHILLING

Born in Richmond, Va., young Shilling was reared here. In July, 1940, he took leave from the Army to join the American Volunteer Group in China. He was credited with shooting down several Japanese planes with the Flying Tigers.

An uncle, Edgar Shilling, was captain of the Morton Cadets, a well known drill team here, at the turn of the century. Another uncle, Harry E. Shilling, served with the 110th Field Artillery, Twenty-ninth Division, in the last World War.

More Planes Would Have Saved Burma, Tigers Say

Miami, July 15 (U.P.)—Nine Flying Tigers, the first of the American Volunteer Group to return from the Chinese war front since their A. V. G. unit was incorporated into the U. S. Army Air Force, said today, "We could have saved Burma if we had a few more planes."

The fliers are here on a visit before they go back to active duty with the Air Corps. Included in the group was Joe Jordon, 40, of Washington, D. C.

Wenchow Lost, Chinese Plead For Air Force

By the Associated Press

Chungking, July 15.—The Chinese acknowledged today the loss of Wenchow, seaport in southern Chekiang Province, but a spokesman pledged that with increasing air support the Chinese army would intensify its counterattacks and immobilize more Japanese troops in China than ever before.

"We will not allow Japan to transfer a single soldier out of this country to other areas," the spokesman declared.

A communique confirmed the Japanese capture of Wenchow on Saturday midnight, but the spokesman said this did not mean that Chinese forces had been trapped on the eastern side of the arc which the Japanese now have extended across Chekiang Province from Hangchow to Wenchow.

The Japanese line in many places consists of thinly-manned garrisons between which Chinese forces are able to cross with comparative impunity, the spokesman said, while in Kiangsi, the next province to the west, the Japnaese drive fanning out from Linchwan has "completely collapsed."

The Chinese communique said 3000 Japanese who moved southward from Patuchen in eastern Kiangsi had suffered heavy losses and retreated, and the spokesman said all Japanese attacks had been stopped east of the Yuhua Mountains.

The Japanese now have been in retreat since July 11, and fighting now is centered around Linchwan, he said.

Elaborating on China's view of the war and of her role of tying up large numbers of Japanese, the spokesman said both Germany and Japan were "now making desperate bids, as they must score certain successes this summer in order to put themselves in a position to sustain a long war against the United Nations."

Thus, he said, the duration of the war will be determined by the crucial two or three months ahead.

He said that if the Allies could win back some of the Japanese positions in the Southwest Pacific this summer "the psychological as well as the material blow to Japan would be tremendous."

He asserted a counteroffensive against Japan would help Russia just as a second front in western Europe would, because it would help reduce the menace to Russia, which Japan is ready to attack."

The Allies "must always take some risk even if we are not quite ready," said the spokesman, warning that a sustained defensive policy only inspired the enemy to further offensive.

In addition to loss of Wenchow, the spokesman said Julan, a port 12 miles southwest of Wenchow, had fallen to the Japanese on Sunday.

Japanese operations near Foochow, in Fukien Province to the south and the last remaining major port in Chinese possession, also arise from fears of its potential use by the United Nations, he said.

Although the Japanese have been ejected from Futuo Island, near Foochow, the spokesman said they still held Lancghi Island.

Soviet Appeals for Second Front Recall Pledge by Britain, U. S. to Act in 1942

Promise Made When Molotov Visited Here

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The agitation in Russia for an Allied "second front" in the West has raised anew the question of what was meant by the Roosevelt-Molotov statement of June 11, following the momentous White House conference between the President and the Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs.

"In the course of the conversations," that statement said, "full understanding was reached with regard to the urgent tasks of creating a second front in Europe in 1942."

It was remarked at the time that this language was somewhat cryptic. However, the man in the street assumed that it meant what it appeared to mean—the cracking open of a second front on the Continent in 1942. American newspapermen in London reported that it might not mean that at all, and they represented "informed sources" in the British capital as saying that vast obstacles stood in the way of a second front this year, particularly the problem of shipping.

Commissar Molotov could hardly have had any doubts about the meaning of the White House statement, for he approved it before flying back to Moscow to report to Premier Josef Stalin.

Now the Moscow newspapers and the Moscow radio are clamoring for a second front as the Germans sweep toward the Volga. That they would do so without the approval of Stalin is unthinkable.

It was suggested here yesterday that the second-front agitation was designed primarily for the Russian people, but this did not appear valid in view of the language of the Moscow broadcasts, which was in the nature of an appeal to America and Britain.

"A second front must be created," said the Moscow radio. "Its creation will entail great sacrifices on the part of American and British peoples, but these sacrifices would be much greater if the Eastern Front did not exist.

"Battles on the Eastern Front are battles for New York and London."

Military men here said yesterday that the situation in Russia was grave, but not necessarily desperate. What apparently had happened, they said, was that Field Marshal Fedor von Bock had caught the Red Army off balance and for the time being was giving it a drubbing.

The Germans had built up heavy reserve strength in the south, and everything indicated that they would drive along the coast of the Sea of Azov in the direction of Rostov. The Russians, expecting such a drive, were ready for the Germans in that area.

Marshal Von Bock, however, struck farther north, about 150 miles above Rostov, and here, apparently, the Russians were not so strong. The result was a swift advance everywhere along a broad front except at Voronezh, northern sector of the Don River line. The Germans were reported to have lost 35,000 dead or wounded in attempts to take Voronezh.

Military analysts emphasized yesterday that Marshal Timoshenko's army still appeared to be intact, and they voiced doubt about the German claim to have captured 125,000 Red army troops.

They thought that Timoshenko might try to make a stand on the east bank of the Don. Even if he has to fall back to the Volga, the professionals said, he might make the German drive so costly in dead and wounded as to cause Hitler to wonder whether he had actually won a victory.

Gets the Bird—And How!

Oscar, 3-month-old kitten, just can't figure it out. It began when he climbed a tree and peeked into a robin's nest when Mama Robin was resting. Since then he has been dive-bombed, strafed, barrel-rolled and loop-the-looped by mama for his incautious snooping. Oscar, owned by Mrs. Edward Finnegan of Seattle, Wash., asks how come? Aren't cats supposed to attack birds? If so, Roberta, pet name for the robin, don't know it. In the continuity strip below, Roberta swoops down on Oscar. She pulls out of her dive and soars up for the attack, making Oscar leap out of range. As she zooms away, Oscar stands bewildered

New Zeros in Action

Canberra, Australia, July 15 (AP).—Air Minister Arthur Drakeford announced today that the Japanese have a new model Zero fighter in operation against Allied forces to the north of Australia.

The new model has great structural strength and has about 1000 horsepower compared with 800 in the old, Drakeford said, but climb and maneuverability have been lost.

He expressed doubt that the new planes could be launched from aircraft carriers.

Draft Boards to Get Reclassifications By End of Week

Distribution to all local draft boards of new draft classifications, designed to preserve family relationships where possible, will be completed by the end of this week, local Selective Service Headquarters reported yesterday.

It was said, however, that the local boards would continue to fill their quotas under the old classifications until the new system is set up, so as to maintain the flow of man power into the Army. Under the revised method three groups of unmarried men are to be inducted before married men.

Officials said that the effect of this new plan would definitely be felt in the middle of August, because many of the men have already been grouped to fill quotas through the first two weeks of August.

Maisky Presses For Action Now, London Hears

By the Associated Press

London, July 15.—Advocates of a second land front in Europe to help Russia pressed firmly tonight for quick action while British sources reported definite and favorable progress in the battle against Nazi submarines which looms as an important factor in all second front considerations.

Qualified London sources who declined to permit use of their names said Russia was pleading again through her envoy, Ivan Maisky, for prompt help by a British-American expedition to Europe to take some of the tremendous Nazi pressure off the Red army.

The Russians in Moscow were indirectly presenting a case for a second front with official reports that the Nazis, suffering huge losses in the battles in southern Russia, had in the last few days hurriedly transferred several division from France and Belgium to the Russian front.

One argument advanced by second fronters here is that if the Germans can set the stage with victories in southern Russia, the Japanese might attack in Siberia.

24 Jap Divisions Ready

The Japanese were said to have gathered at least 24 divisions, some 360,000 men, in Manchukuo with air reinforcements from the home islands.

In that connection, it was pointed out also that August and September are the best months for campaigning in Siberia.

Public sympathy for Russian pleas for a second front now was seen in weekend mass meetings at Glasgow and Liverpool in which a new front and all aid for Russia were demanded.

While an R. A. F. commentator noted "definitely good results" in the American-British war upon Nazi submarines, Soviet strategists declared themselves not satisfied that the British air offensive against Europe was heavy enough to pull German troops from the Eastern Front.

But with all the talk of a second front, military sources here envisioned such an effort as a permanent, well-considered attempt requiring exhaustive preparation and not just a hit-run affair.

"All preparations for opening a second front are under way and the objective is a front which will be permanent, not only a large hit and run raid," one informant said. "The type of operation now being done by the Commandos will be part of any major invasion scheme."

Bullitt Arrives in London

Meanwhile, William C. Bullitt, special assistant to U. S. Navy Secretary Frank Knox, arrived in London today. It was understood he would talk with Admiralty shipping officials on the best means of combating submarines.

The R. A. F. commentator who reported progress in the war on submarines said British fliers are hammering at submarines at all stages of production and are keeping up "large-scale attacks on German war industry."

The bomber command has attacked factories making submarine parts, submarine storage batteries, submarines under construction on slips, and the huge submarine ports on the Atlantic.

Criticism of U.S. Arms Held Axis Inspired

Axis agents in the Middle East are spreading false rumors that the British consider American planes, tanks and equipment inferior and don't care for them, a United States Army officer just back from North Africa reported yesterday.

The officer, Col. Demas Craw of the Air Corps, declared that the objective of the propaganda campaign is to lower the morale of the American worker building lend-lease arms and slow down his output.

"In bars and restaurants, in private homes and clubs, throughout Cairo, Alexandria, and all the cities of the Near East," Colonel Craw stated, "Axis agents are working overtime attempting to create dissension between the British and the Americans.

"These agents have an ultimate purpose, which is to reach back to the American factory worker and make him feel that the British are dissipating his all-out efforts. They are spreading this subversive propaganda among transport pilots, workers, soldiers, anyone who might unwittingly pass the word back to America."

Colonel Craw has been in a position to study Axis propaganda activities, having served as an observer abroad since October, 1940. He took part in R. A. F. bombing raids in Libya and in April, 1941, was captured by the Germans in Greece. Released in Athens two months later, he returned to Egypt through Bulgaria, Rumania and Turkey. His comment was released by the War Department press branch yesterday.

"Contrary to the German talk," Colonel Craw said, "the British have been most cooperative, helping us in every possible way."

The American Army officer declared that our Air Force and the R. A. F. are cooperating excellently in the Battle of Egypt. "They're the same breed of cats," he added.

German Drive Imperils Soviet Food Supply

By the Associated Press

The German advance into the Don River area north of the Caucasus Mountains threatens an important agricultural region upon which Russia has been depending for grain, meat and other food supplies for her southern armies.

The loss of this area would increase Russian demands for American food supplies at a time when there is an acute shortage of ships to move war materials across submarine-infested waters and along Axis air-patrolled sea lanes.

The value of the north Caucasus as a food-producing area was emphasized in an Agriculture Department report issued yesterday.

"Although much has been written since the beginning of the present war about the Caucasian oil fields, little attention has been given," the report said, "to the southern Russian 'bread basket,' often associated in the public mind with the Ukraine only. North Caucasus is one of the richest agricultural areas of the Soviet Union."

Former President Ortiz Of Argentina Dies at 55

Retired Leader Admired Roosevelt, Favored Democracy

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, July 15.—Former President Roberto M. Ortiz of Argentina, who resigned his post June 24 after being inactive for nearly two years because of ill health and near blindness, died today.

Ortiz, who was 55, had suffered from diabetes for several years and his condition became serious yesterday after an attack of bronchial pneumonia. His condition was further complicated by a kidney ailment, it was said.

An admirer of President Roosevelt, Ortiz, who favored closer cooperation with the United States and other American nations, said he had refrained from resigning earlier because there was a chance of regaining his health.

Ortiz rose from the post of city councilman in Buenos Aires to become his country's eighteenth President. He was forced to retire from active administration of his office at a time when his faith in democracy and his abhorrence of aggression seemed destined to lead Argentina on a path far different from the present course of "prudent neutrality."

Ortiz was born in Buenos Aires on September 24, 1886. He was a medical student when he decided to make his career in law. He was elected to the city council when only 32 and served in the Chamber of Deputies from 1920 to 1924.

He became Minister of Public Works in 1925 and initiated harbor improvements in Buenos Aires and other ports. Returning to his law practice in 1928, he became president of a number of companies and took an important part in the city's economic life.

He was appointed Minister of Finance by his predecessor as President, Agustin P. Justo, and served in that office until elected President for the 1938-1944 term.

As President he sought to relieve poverty and distress in Argentina's rural sections, but illness forced him to retire before he made much progress.

Even in recent weeks, there was hope that his eyesight could be restored, permitting him to return to office. A New York eye specialist flew to Buenos Aires to examine the ailing President, but Ortiz submitted his resignation soon afterward. His attending physicians had advised him his general health would not permit the operation which was recommended.

Laval to Bare Negotiations On Vichy Fleet

By the Associated Press

Paris, July 15.—Pierre Laval, chief of the Vichy government, announced tonight he is planning to publish tomorrow full texts of French negotiations with the United States, Germany and Italy concerning units of the French fleet at Alexandria.

(Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, in Washington, announced Tuesday that France twice had rejected American proposals to remove the warships in the face of the German advance toward Alexandria.

(President Roosevelt suggested that they be taken through the Suez Canal to an American or a neutral Western Hemisphere port. Vichy insisted they be transferred to a nearby French port, which the United States considered too close to German and Italian influence, Welles said.)

Flynn Collapses While Making Film

Hollywood, July 15 (INS).—Errol Flynn's physician said tonight that the film star's condition is "satisfactory" following his collapse today on the set at the Warner Brothers Studio.

Flynn was rushed to Good Samaritan Hospital, where Dr. Leland Chapman said Flynn's collapse was due to complete exhaustion resulting from the physical strain of making prize-fight scenes for a picture, in which Flynn portrays former Heavyweight Champion Jim Corbett.

'Small Business' Supported Before Senate Committee

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday told a House committee that the subsidy plan for helping 24,000 small industrial plants now facing a shutdown is "the ablest approach of any I have thought of.

"My impression is that we'll need a lot of those businesses in the war effort before long and that we can afford an investment on them," he said in testimony before the Small Business Committee.

Henderson said the 24,000 smaller plants do an aggregate of four billion dollars of business a year and represent 13 per cent of all manufacturers and produce 8 per cent of all manufacturing output. Tens of thousands of service companies also face a shutdown, he said, explaining:

"The war production industries are devouring raw materials as fast as we can produce them. . . . This simply means that nonwar producing firms cannot get necessary materials."

Then, speaking of the situation generally, as well as of the small businesses, he added:

"To use the vulgar expression, you ain't seen nothing yet."

Mr. Henderson said he was for a subsidy program that would aid manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers threatened with bankruptcy because of the war program. The subsidies should not be automatic, he said, because some businesses would drop out as "natural results of the competitive system.

Organ Features Cathedral Rites

A half-hour organ recital from 7:45 to 8:15 p. m. will be a part of the Tuesday and Thursday night pilgrimages at the Washington Cathedral, it was announced there yesterday. Ellis C. Varley, who has just come from Hartford, Conn., to be assistant cathedral organist, will be at the Great Organ console.

The cathedral recently began opening its doors on Tuesday and Thursday nights to accommodate persons employed during the day. The pilgrimages begin at 7 and 8:15 p. m.

mately 14 million dollars.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia asserted that the three "sales engineers," holding commission contracts with omre than two-score manufacturers, had an "inside track" at the Navy Department which had helped them make a profit of $646,701 during the first six months of the year.

"You three men, sitting here in Washington," Vinson declared angrily, "are getting $1150 each a day, every day for the first six months of this year, including Sunday, while boys are dying at Bataan and Corregidor and on the Lexington.

"I am going to see if I can break up this practice of contingent fees. There's no justification for it. You've built up a clientele and created the impression that these people (the manufacturers) have to come to you to get business with the Government, and that you can get specifications changed so that they can handle the work."

Before the committee were the three partners of the company—A. P. Shirley, a one-time Army major, who said his income in 1929 was between $7500 and $10,000, and F. B. Olcott and F. C. Nichols, both former civilian employes of the Navy, the former at $4600 a year and the latter at $4000.

Vinson observed in an exchange with Shirley that "your firm has a fine approach to both the Army and the Navy—you as a former major and the other two as former Navy employes in responsible positions."

Records Introduced

With representatives of the Justice Department, the Army and the Navy sitting in, Thomas Kinkel, committee counsel, drew upon a mass of photostatic copies of the firm's records to bring out its operations in recent years.

He read letters from Shirley to the company's clients which contained references to "delightful friends" in the Navy Department, and to pulling "every possible string" to obtain priority ratings for manufacturers.

Shirley acknowledged that his company, operating as a "jobber," had realized a profit of $50,000 on a Government prime contract for chains, although it had no facilities for manufacturing chains.

Making Too Much Money, Says Olcott

F. B. Olcott, of the Shirley, Olcott & Nichols Co., told The Post last night that his firm has been renegotiating contracts with its clients "for more than a year" to curtail profits and that eventually all contracts would have been renegotiated.

"We haven't been in too big a hurry," he said, "because the Government gets 80 per cent of what we make in taxes anyway and we didn't see that it made much difference whether we gave the money back or our clients did.

"The trouble is that we have been making too much money and we realize that as much as anybody. We were unable to keep these profits in line because when the war came along business grew faster than we could keep up with it."

He said there are "perhaps a half-dozen" firms in Washington which represent manufacturers who were unable "during the lean years" to keep their own representatives here. His firm, he pointed out, has been in business since 1929 and "a man will go before the committee tomorrow who has been doing that kind of business here for 30 years."

War Boomed "Sales"

"Of course, when the war boom started," he said, "a lot of fly-by-night fellows opened up here to skim off the cream wherever they could. We have been doing a high-grade engineering business in bad years as well as good, and the only trouble now is that we are making too much money due to an unusual condition."

He pointed out that representation in Washington by firms doing business with the Government is "standard practice." Triumph Explosives Co., he added, was one of his firm's oldest clients, having been a fireworks manufacturer before engaging in highly technical operations for the Government.

Olcott, who is listed in the telephone directory as a metallurgist, lives at 7828 Orchid Street Northwest. Shirley and Nichols are both listed as sales engineers. Shirley lives at Mount Vernon, Va., and Nichols at 4720 Quebec Street Northwest.

Nicholas pointed out last night that the firm's service saved the time of working executives who might otherwise come to Washington, and pointed out that Congress could regulate fees for such service by taxation.

Posters Issued To Help Fat Salvage Drive

Graphically illustrating the tremendouse need for housewives to conserve their waste fats for explosives, the War Production Board salvage division has issued thousands of high-powered posters to meat dealers all over the Nation for display purposes.

Showing the greasy contents of a frying pan pouring directly into a (censored) variety of (censored) cannon, the posters are aimed directly at the lady of the house, considered the only factor in this particular salvage campaign.

Because household fats contain glycerin, and glycerin makes explosives, this domestic product has untold value as a defense material.

So important is it considered by WPB, that meat dealers are authorized to pay patriotic housewives 3 cents a pound for pan drippings, broiler drippings and deep fats—lards, vegetable shortenings and all other fat by-products.

Conservers are urged not to take less than 1 pound at a time to dealers, and to avoid glass containers or paper bags. If fats stand too long, they become rancid and the glycerin content, while not injured, is reduced, thus defeating the purpose. Hence milady is warned to keep her household wastes in a cool place and to make deliveries frequently.

Mrs. Newton Wing, chairman of the local committee, is a strong advocate of 1-pound coffee cans, complete with lids. One big grocery store, with 45 pounds of fat already cached away, observed that most customers favor 3-pound vegetable cans, but anything of the sort is perfectly acceptable as long as it is clean.

Just to cooperate with meat dealers, WPB suggests that fats be turned in early in the week, during the slack time, rather than on busy weekends.

Josh Lee Wins in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, July 15 (AP).—Oklahoma Democrats named two outspoken Roosevelt backers to lead them into the November election for Senator and Governor on the basis of virtually complete unofficial returns from yesterday's primary election.

Josh Lee, ardent New Dealer, seeking re-election as junior Senator, held a clear majority over nine opponents, while towering Robert S. Kerr, 45-year-old National Committeeman, widened a convincing margin over six other candidates for Governor.

The count in 3490 out of 3674 precincts gave Kerr, Oklahoma City independent oil man, 141,813 to 129,145 for his nearest opponent, Gomer Smith, former Congressman and old age pension advocate.

Lee faced a proven campaigner, W. B. Pine, Okmulgee independent oil man and former Senator, who won the Republican nod without effort.

The Senator defeated Orel Busby, Ada attorney, who ran second, and 72-year-old W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, grizzled former Governor, both of whom made the Lee record a principal issue.

Kerr will go up against W. J. Otjen, Enid attorney and former State Senator, who won the Republican nomination with ease.

Wilburn Cartwright, veteran of eight terms in Congress as representative of the Third District, was unable to overcome a substantial lead taken by rotund Paul Stewart, Antlers publisher and State senator, in their race for the Democratic congressional nomination.

Unofficial returns from 490 precincts out of 505 gave Stewart 29,618 and Cartwright 28,310.

The other five Democratic congressmen who faced opposition in the primary appeared to have been renominated.

Lyle Boren, Seminole, third-term member, who had been in hot water all day as Park Wyatt, Shawnee attorney, threatened his lead, finally pulled away to a strong majority in their Fourth District race.

In 498 precincts out of 500, Boren received 21,922 to Wyatt's 16,638.

Senate Backs Down on OPA Jobs, Funds

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday wrung concessions from a reluctant Senate which Administration leaders said will enable him to go forward with price control plans.

Concessions made by the Senate, in the $1,861,801,710 supplemental defense bill included a five million dollars increase in appropriations, the right to continue regulation of processed farm products, and clearance of higher paid employes on his OPA staff.

On the brink of passing the big defense measure, now carrying $125,000,000 in OPA funds, the Senate tossed out of the bill a requirement that every Henderson employe, past and future, earning over $4500, be confirmed by the Senate.

Earlier this week, Administration leaders warned the Senate that a vote for that restriction would carry word that Congress was more interested in jobs than price control.

The increase in appropriations was 15 million dollars under Henderson's minimum request for funds, but it was $50,000,000 in excess of the House grant and leaders said it would suffice.

But the measure, as it neared passage, was not all Henderson could have wished in many ways. Still retained in the bill was a flat prohibition on use of any OPA funds for subsidy payments to industries caught between price ceilings and increased costs.

The five million dollars increase over the original Senate allotment for OPA was proposed by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and adopted by a voice vote. Other Senators said Henderson could ask Congress for more funds when these ran low. Likewise adopted by voice vote was the motion to strike out confirmation of OPA jobs.

A drive to pass the bill before nightfall failed when Senator Bone (Democrat) of Washington failed to raise a quorum on a motion to remove similar confirmation restrictions on employes of the Office of Civilian Defense. Before rejecting the OPA job-confirmation amendment, the Senate had voted to subject OCD employes earning over $4500 to similar Senate review Bone argued that the Senate should make the same rule apply to both agencies, and moved to strike the OCD restriction. The Senate voted against this 26 to 20, but the chair ruled the vote incomplete as no quorum was present. Another roll call will automatically be ordered on the Bone motion when the Senate meets today.

OPA Workers Warned to Stay Out of Politics

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday warned some 40,000 paid and voluntary workers for the Office of Price Administration that they will lose their jobs if they participate in political activities.

In an Administrative order, Henderson told 13,000 paid employes and 25,000-odd voluntary workers on local war price and rationing boards that they can't work for the OPA and for politicians too.

"No one in the OPA is going to be permitted to play politics with the war effort," Henderson said. "I have always said that OPA is going to run on nonpartisan lines. My order today reaffirms that principle. As I have said in the past, if the Hatch Act doesn't get them, the Henderson axe will."

OPA spokesmen denied that there have been any instances of political activities by employes or by price and ration board workers which might have occasioned issuance of the order. They said Henderson's action was merely a precaution in an election year.

OPA has found it necessary, however, to dismiss several workers on ration boards for partiality in administration of ration orders. In one instance, an entire board was discharged after it was found to have been working on a tire deal in violation of rationing regulations.

There are now about 7500 war price and rationing boards in operation, with a total of 25,000 or more employes. These voluntary workers are not subject to restrictions of the Hatch Act, because they are not paid Federal employes.

"Even though the act may not be technically applicable to him—and this includes local board members—any person will be subject to prompt dismissal if it is established that he has been using his office for political purposes," the Price Chief declared.

House Swings to Senate Stand, Passes Long-Held Farm Bill

grain for alcohol and industrial uses, such as manufacture of synthetic rubber.

A split in the farm bloc, powerful when united, enabled the Administration to win its first triumph against it. Representatives of surplus-ridden wheat States broke away from the corn bloc, which feared the wheat sales would break the corn market. The potent American Farm Bureau Federation sided with the corn members in the fight, and until yesterday the Administration had been powerless to break its House influence.

In the Senate, meanwhile, the Administration reaped a farm harvest hardly second in importance to the House victory.

Stricken from the first supplemental defense bill was an ironclad prohibition against Price Administrator fixing ceilings for any processed farm commodity until they passed the 110 per cent parity floor for farm goods written into the price bill.

Barkley Backed Henderson

The Administration had never recognized the floor, and Henderson had fixed ceilings on a wide rnage of processed goods without regard to the formula. Adoption of the original Senate amendment would have invalidated all of these.

Majority Leader Barkley went to bat for Henderson, and following conferences with Minority Leader McNary and Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, offered a compromise. Adopted by a vote of 37 to 16, this in effect restores language contained in the price act. Net result, Henderson could not be bound to the rigid farm formula in fixing prices of processed commodities. With the farm bloc in retreat, Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia moved to strike all of the farm restrictions out of the bill, but this move failed.

Jail for Indecent Exposure Asked

Legislation to provide a jail sentence as punishment for the crime of indecent exposure in the District was asked of Congress yesterday by the Commissioners.

Only penalty provided for the offense under present law is a fine of not more than $250.

"It is felt that in cases of this nature," the Commissioners wrote, "the court should have the power to impose a sentence of imprisonment, and the proposed bill therefore fixes the punishment at imprisonment for not more than 90 days or a fine of not more than $250 for each offense."

WLB Orders 44c a Day Rise For Little Steel

met." Further action would be decided by the referendum, he said.

WLB's action cutting the union's wage demand by 56 cents followed board consideration of a report by a special three-man fact-finding panel which gave substantial support to the union's demands. In arguing their case before the full board, the union representatives had urged WLB to support the findings of its own panel.

During most of the discussion on the case, the employer members argued against the granting of any increase while the labor members held out for the full $1 a day boost. The employer members changed their stand to make a final decision possible when it became clear that the labor members would not yield.

Chief consolation which the labor members might find in the decision was its order regarding the issue of union security—a maintenance of union membership clause combined with a company check-off of union dues.

This order, which was weighed with almost as much controversy as the wage decision, was expected to protect the union against the disintegration which might follow the unfavorable wage decision. On this issue the four employer members dissented, with the four public members joining the four labor members to make the board's order effective.

The order requires all union members who fail to withdraw after a fixed period to remain union members for the duration of the contract between the companies and the union or lose their jobs. The dues of all those accepted by the maintenance order will be deducted from their pay checks each month by the companies and turned over to the union, under the check-off ordered.

The granting of union security in "Little Steel" was regarded as a considerable triumph for organized labor, since the steel companies had previously refused to sign any kind of a contract with a union. However, even here, the board may face defiance. In the course of hearings before WLB, representatives of the steel companies indicated they may challenge the WLB order of union maintenance in the courts.

The sole remaining issue in dispute—the union's demand for a daily minimum wage guarantee—was settled by a unanimous vote granting the union's demand with the understanding that the ruling was not to result in additional cost to the companies.

Meanwhile, the War Production Board's West Coast aircraft wage stabilization conference in session at Los Angeles experienced a stormy session yesterday with labor members threatening to bolt the conference unless the Government acted to expel Richard Gilbert, a representative of the Office of Price Administration.

Nelson's action ordering the Government representatives to return to Washington was taken too late for disclosure to the conferees yesterday. It is expected to be announced to them when the conference resumes this morning. At that time, the conference may be recessed indefinitely at the call of its chairman—Paul R. Porter of the labor division of the War Production Board.

At the Pittsburgh meeting, Murray attacked the Office of Price Administration for its attitude toward both the steel case and the West Coast aircraft conference. He specifically singled out Gilbert, OPA observer at the Los Angeles conference, for attack and stated that the conference would "bog down" with the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. withdrawing from the conference unless the "influence of Leon Henderson"—meaning Gilbert—was removed from the conference.

A similar request to remove Gilbert from the conference was dispatched to Nelson by Harvey Brown, president of the International Association of Machinists, American Federation of Labor. (Both the machinists and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers have large memberships in the aircraft industry. According to Murray, more than a million workers are involved.)

"Fear of Henderson"

"There is much fear of Henderson," Murray told reporters in Pittsburgh, "that these members (of WLB) want to turn over the question of wages to him. That was reflected by the statement of Dick Gilbert, Henderson's righthand man, who declared that there could be no wage increase in the aircraft industry."

Brown accused the OPA of an "un-American and fascist attitude" and said that it has "periled the entire union labor movement and the future of collective bargaining as an institution in this country." He stated that Gilbert's statements had already started a migration of workers from the aircraft industry to the better-paying shipyards on the West Coast.

Labor asked that unskilled labor be raised from 60 cents an hour to 95 cents, with other increases to a top of $1.60 for skilled workmen drawing up to $1.52 an hour. Management representatives from nine West Coast factories agreed to grant a wage increase, but asked the conference to establish the amount.

Tires Assured If Care Is Used, Jones and Farish Declare

existing tires can, with careful driving and constant attention, be kept going for two years or longer."

Plans Nearly Complete

In a statement issued through the information facilities of the War Production Board, a circumstance showing it has the board's approval, A. L. Viles, president of the Rubber Manufacturers Association, declared that the industry has drawn up a plan (said to be about three-quarters completed) "which it hopes may help in keeping essential war materials and war workers on the highways."

Apparently referring to published reports that pictured the plan as blasting the rubber shortage "myth" and making even pleasure driving possible, Viles declared :

"This plan does not envision relaxation of present restrictions. It does not permit pleasure driving, and even for essential car operations calls for low speeds and continuous tire care."

Secretary Jones, testifying before the Senate Banking Committee, shed more official light on the rubber industry's plan, a phase of which is concerned with materials for recapping civilian tires. He quoted Charles F. Kettering, General Motors research chief, as believing that thiokol, a Dow Chemical Co. product, can be used for retreading tires which should be capable of 5000 to 10,000 miles "with careful driving."

"Regardless of any success that may come from an yof the plans under wa to make existing tires last as long as possible through retreads, repairs, etc.," warned Jones, "no one should use his automobile except for absolutely necessary driving."

Four major "ifs" are involved in rubber, said the WPB spokesman. There may be enough tires for "essential" civilian driving, he stated, if motorists cut down their speeds, if the military can spare even the relatively small amount of crude needed for recaps, if reclaimed rubber is available in adequate amounts and if enough synthetic is produced in time.

Committee Hears Farish

Testifying before a House Mines and Mining Subcommittee headed by Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, Farish made it clear that he has no doubts about the success of either Government or private synthetic programs. Standard, alone, by use of emergency or makeshift equipment, might be able to make 50,000 tons of additional rubber before the end of 1943. "That means an additional 8,500,000 tires," he stated.

Farish said he thought "it is possible" that the entire oil industry, with makeshift programs, could produce "at least" 200,000 tons of rubber by the end of next year. With 1 ton of rubber, the tire industry can make 170 tires, Farish said. His rubber program, therefore, might produce material for 24 million tires, 1 million below normal production.

Standard's rubber plan comes in two parts. The first concerns emergency production of butadiene, important rubber raw material in which there is a present bottleneck. Butadiene, and thus more Buna S rubber, may be made well in advance of the regular program, he said.

"Good Prospects"

The second part involves makeshift manufacture of isobutylene, raw material for Standard's butyl rubber, the relatively small concentrated supplies of which now go into manufacture of aviation gasoline. Farish said there are "fairly good prospects" of solving this difficulty with "spare parts and junk" with the result that, by using more makeshift equipment and ordinary dry ice instead of elaborate refrigeration machinery, it should be possible to produce at least 100 tons of day of Flexon, a butyl type rubber.

"This is good news, but it does not warrant undue optimism on the part of American motorists," warned Farish. "There should be conservation of rubber. We are not yet out of the woods in this business of synthetic rubber, and nothing should be done to waste supplies that may turn out to be crucial."

The color at the hearing was provided by a Norwegian-born scientist, Dr. Per K. Frolich, who presided over an array of experimental synthetic tires, some of which have gone over 10,000 miles, and from a succession of seemingly magical materials produced both Buna S and Butyl rubber. The show, abundantly photographed by movie and still cameramen, was one of the most spectacular that Capitol Hill has seen in many years.

Ball Tossed Around

When Dr. Frolich added brine to his Buna latex and the milk-like substance began to coagulate into rubber, some 100 legislators applauded. Frolich handed a ball of the rubber to Randolph. Randolph bounced it up and down. Presently, the ball was tossed back and forth around the hearing table and out into the audience, before it got back to Randolph.

Butyl rubber comes with explosive suddenness and boils out of its container like overcooked starch. This happens when isobutylene and diolefin are submitted to a catylist and 150-below-zero cold. The performance brought another burst of applause from the audience which was also happy to learn that Butyl's inventors are two American scientists, W. J. Sparks and R. M. Thomas.

Between the main show and one especially staged for newsreel cameramen, legislators asked Farish questions. Representative Winter (Republican) of Kansas wanted to know if synthetic rubber had enough stretch to be used in "things called foundation garments."

"That's a little too much for me," laughed Farish, "but I suppose it can."

Nelson To Take Full Charge of Rubber Output

Copyright by Chicago Sun

War Production Czar Donald M. Nelson personally will take jurisdiction soon over all WPB phases of the wartime rubber program, it was learned last night.

He will take from Rubbe Coordinator Arthur Newhall most of the power vested in him when he took the rubber coordination post three months ago, and will assume full responsibility for all of Newhall's previous actions.

Roosevelt May Seek Wage Legislation

day upset members' plans for a speedy get-away. All plans for a formal recess were reported "out." Congress probably will stand by in a series of short three-day recesses for tighter price control legislation, one informed member said. This informant said the program was expected to shape up within the month, possibly following close on the heels of the War Labor Board's "Little Steel" decision.

Canadian wage control methods are known to have been under close Administration study in recent months, while the President conducted a preliminary skirmish with farm blocs bent on enforcing 110 per cent farm parity provisions of the original price bill.

Yesterday's collapse of congressional efforts to block below-parity sales of Government grain may clear the way for an Administration drive to completely eliminate 110 per cent parity requirements and to move at the same time to bring wages under a variable ceiling.

Guard Tells Of Seeing Spies Landed by Sub

the six-mile east patrol. The weather was thick, visibility poor. He had covered only 300 yards when he saw three men. One of them was in civilian clothes and the other two were in bathing suits. The man who was dressed was on the shore. The other two were in water up to their knees.

Cullen called out, "What's the trouble?"

Nobody answered. The man on shore started toward Cullen.

Cullen called again, "Who are you?"

There was no answer. The man kept advancing.

Cullen reached to his hip pocket for a flashlight. The foremost man saw the motion, and apparently thinking the Coast Guardsman was reaching for a gun, cried out, "Wait a minute. Are you the Coast Guard?"

Cullen answered, "Yes. Who are you?"

"A couple of fishermen from Southampton who have run aground."

"Come up to the station and wait for daybreak."

Cullen recalled later that the weather seemed to get worse and the fog closed in.

The spokesman snapped, "Wait a minute—you don't know what's going on. How old are you? Have you a father and mother? I wouldn't want to have to kill you."

One of the men in a bathing suit came up through the fog, dragging a bag. He started to speak in German.

Clams Query Just A Bait

Cullen spoke up. "What's in the bag? Clams"

Cullen knew there was no clams for miles around.

The man in civilian clothes said, "Yes, that's right."

Cullen's pretended gullibility appeared to influence him. In a friendly voice he said, "Why don't you forget the whole thing? Here is some money. One hundred dollars."

Cullen said, "I don't want it."

The man took some more bills out of his wallet. "Then take $300."

Cullen thought fast. He answered "o. k."

The stranger gave him the money, saying, "Now look me in the eyes."

As Cullen explained to his superiors later, he said he was afraid he might be hynpotized. The stranger insisted. Cullen braced himself and looked directly at the man. Nothing happened, to Cullen's relief. As he looked at thim, the stranger kept repeating, "Would you recognize me if you saw me again? When Cullen finally said "no," the man appeared satisfied.

Cullen started away and as soon as he was enveloped in the fog he raced to the Coast Guard station and told Carl Ross Jenette, B. M. 2c, who was officer in charge, what had happened. Jenette telephoned the alarm to his superiors, reaching Warrant Officer Oden and Warren Barnes, C. B. M., at the latter's home nearby.

Meanwhile, Jenette had gathered three other men and armed them all and Cullen with 30-caliber rifles. They hurried to the spot on the beach, but they could find no trace of the landing.

Jenette posted Cullen and two other men on guard and, with the forth, started to explore the dunes.

Within 15 minutes after he had received the alarm, Barnes was on the scene to take charge. As he arrived at the spot, he saw, through a rift in the fog, a long, thin object, about 70 feet long, about 150 feet off shore. Cullen is reported to have heard the noise of powerful Diesel engines just off shore. Barnes, fearing a landing, distributed his men behind sand with orders to resist invasion. But fog swallowed up the ship and the noise died away.

At this point, a seaman summoned Cullen back to the station, where he gave a more detailed report to Oden, who was in charge of the Amagansett station and several others. As soon as he could, Cullen started back to the landing spot. On the way, he encountered Jenette's searching party. They saw a light on a distant dune, but when they got there they could find nothing in the dark.

Cullen and Barnes returned to the station where Cullen insisted on getting the bribe money out of his hands. Barnes made out a receipt for the money and it was at that time they discovered that it consisted of two $50 bills, five $20 bills and six $10 bills—$260.

They returned to the search of the dunes. At this time they heard the chugging of engines again. As Barnes said, "It started with a roar and then became a steady Diesel-throb. The boat went in an easterly direction."

Throughout the nigt the Coast Guard men searched. The first alarm had been relayed to Army and Navy stations and before dawn soldiers joined the search.

German Cigarettes Found

As dawn broke, Cullen and Barnes found some cigarettes of German manufacture half-buried in the sand. The cigarettes were in silver paper in a cardboard pull-box. About the same time Seaman Brooks discovered a furrow in the sand caused by a dragging object. The searchers followed it to a spot in the sand that seemed wetter than others, as freshly disturbed sand looks. Cullen said later that if they had arrived a few minutes later, the wet spot would have evaporated in the morning sun and they might never have found it. Some distance off, possibly arranged as a marker, a searcher discovered a pair of wet bathing trunks.

Coast Guards poked a stick into the wet spot and fet something hard. They dug and in a few minutes came upon four cases, two heavy and one light. The heavy one weighed about 70 pounds. The cases were of wood and bound with marlin that made a handle. They ripped off some of the wood of one case and found an inner case of tin.

Barnes, meanwhile, had found another wet spot and had dug up some German clothing, including two German dungaree outfits, a reversible civilian overcoat, overshoes and an overseas cap with a swastika.

At the station, a seaman opened one of the tins with a can opener and found a large number of pen and pencil sets. A larger box was filled with loose powder and glass tubes—all of which they concluded were material for incendiary bombs.

The material was taken to the barge office in New York City. Three crates were opened in the office of Captain Bayliss, but when they started to open the fourth, a hissing sound was heard.

"It was suggested," says a report in the Coast Guard files, "that they open it at the end of the pier."

Lieut. Comdr. J. A. Glynn and Lieut. (j. g.) F. W. Nirschel and Lieut. (j. g.) Sydney K. Franken opened the box there. They discovered the hissing sound had been caused by the contact of salt water with TNT.

FBI men under J. Edgar Hoover took up the chase from there and rounded up, not only the men who had been landed in the fog on Amagansett beach, but another group that had been landed on the Florida coast. Both groups are on trial before the military commission.

Confession of Spy Who Told All Read to Military Commission

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The statement of the spy who told all was read yesterday to the Military Commission which is trying the informer and his seven Nazi colleagues for their lives under the laws of war.

The Government is demanding the death penalty for all eight, who crept off two U-boats last month.

The informer, however, has clung to the hope that he would be spared for a prison cell if the other seven were marched out to a scaffold or a firing squad at the end of the trial next week.

The statement was so long and complete that the entire afternoon session was not long enough for the reading which will be continued when the commission resumes the hearing at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

The commission's terse communique added nothing to previous indications that the informer was George John Dasch, the 39-year-old leader of the four spies who were landed at Amagansett Beach, Long Island, the night of June 13.

President Roosevelt appointed two defense attorneys—Col. Kenneth C. Royall and Col. Cassius M. Dowell—in the decree which set up the commission. They started at once to prepare whatever defense they could for the eight Germans.

Shortly before the commission began the trial, a third lawyer, Col. Carl L. Ristine, was designated to act for Dasch. Colonel Ristine suggested that this was because a "conflict of interest" had developed among the eight Germans.

Colonel Ristine was in conference yesterday and Tuesday with a tall man of military carriage, who was evidently called as a defense witness. He refused to give his name and photographs made of him were withdrawn at the request of the Office of War Information. The OWI explained that the man's usefulness as a counter espionage operative would be impaired by any publicity that would enable people to recognize him.

While the proceedings before the Military Commission continued through their seventh day of secrecy, the Coast Guard yesterday revealed the story of the Nazis' Long Island landing, which was watched by Seaman John C. Cullen, 21.

Cullen was called as a witness in the spy trial last week, being accompanied by Lieut. (j. g.) Sydney K. Franken and two other officers. Franken was one of the officers who opened the spies' can of TNT.

The Coast Guard statement closed with the point at which the search for the spies was taken over by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and did not disclose any further work on the case by Coast Guard intelligence officers.

There was a possibility that a further announcement would be made, revealing some of the details of the hunt that led to the rounding up of the spies by FBI agents.

The Military Commission said yesterday that Attorney General Biddle and Maj. Myron Cramer would use "the next few days" to complete the prosecution's case, so it seemed unlikely that the commission's judgment would be entered until next week.

Mason Backs Ruhland in Tiff At Glenn Dale

Criticism by Health Officer George C. Ruhland of the action of patients at Glenn Dale Sanatorium in complaining to Congress about hospital conditions was upheld last night by Commissioner Guy Mason who said that the patients should have taken their grievances first to the immediate authorities.

Ruhland, addressing the staff and ambulatory patients at the sanatorium last Thursday, had said that the committee's complaints to Congress, mostly on the quality of food served, was "not fair play—not cricket." He added that "the reaction on the outside is that it would have been much better if we had proceeded according to Hoyle."

Ruhland's reprimands brought a further complaint to Renah Camalier, counsel to the Senate District Committee, who requested Mason to make an investigation of Ruhland's alleged remarks. A transcription of Ruhland's address was obtained and forwarded yesterday to Camalier.

Patients Reported Berated

According to William Rittenhouse, chairman of a committee representing the patients, last Thursday night Ruhland "shouted, he accused, he made veiled threats. He berated us for asking for better conditions through petition to Congress. He maintained that the food was not bad and that no unsanitary conditions of any consequence had in fact existed."

In his letter to Camalier, Rittenhouse continued, "To say that Doctor Ruhland upset the entire sanatorium is to put it mildly."

In the transcription of Ruhland's speech it was revealed Ruhland did express to the patients extreme disapproval of the publicity given the statement of conditions at Glenn Dale, and defended the food, which had drawn criticism from a congressional delegation and Mason himself upon a surprise visit to the institution several weeks ago.

Patients Wrong, Mason Says

Mason, who at that time had condemned the unappetizing appearance of the food, said last night that no criticism of it had ever been made to the sanatorium management or to the Health Department. For that reason, he said, the patients were wrong in going over the head of the local officials to Congress.

Maintaining that the entire problem is one of administration, Mason said that this should be easily remedied as the Civil Service Commission yesterday had approved reclassification of Glenn Dale cooks enabling higher wages to be paid. This reclassification had been sought since last September.

He also said that the Glenn Dale superintendent, Dr. Daniel Finucane, had been instructed to visit every patient "once every two or three months" so a personal contact could be established. A "complaint box" was ordered installed on every floor, he said, so patients will not feel that they have to go to Congress.

New Committee Proposed

An advisory committee to the District from the National Tuberculosis Association, reporting on the Glenn Dale affair, deplored the "sinister character of the impressions created recently through publications of the press" but otherwise did not "feel justified to pass judgment upon the merits of the petition signed by 85 patients out of a total patient personnel of approximately 508 adults."

Instead, the committee suggested that another committee be appointed to make a survey. On the proposed committee would be members appointed by the president of the National Tuberculosis Association, the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, and the Director of the Veterans' Administration.

Dr. William Charles White was the chairman of the advisory committee, which also included Drs. Roy D. Adams, John Minor, William H. Hough and James G. Townsend.

Townsend, Jap Agent, Asking Shorter Term

Ralph Townsend, the former American consular official who became a paid propaganda agent of the Japanese government, has petitioned for reduction of the 8 to 24 month prison term to which he was sentenced June 12. He pleaded guilty to charge of violating the Foreign Agents Act.

Townsend was in the pay of the Japanese agency, Jikyoku Iinkai, which spread propaganda in this country under the direction of the Tokyo foreign ministry. Among Townsend's pamphlets, written for the Japanese, was one called "America Has No Enemies in Asia."

Townsend also was one of the editors for the pro-Axis, antiinterventionist enterprise which issued Scribner's Commentator at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Special Prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell said they thought Townsend ought to serve his prison term and would oppose his petition.

Lightning Killed Air Base Head, Coroner Finds

Atlanta, July 15 (AP).—Lieut. Col. John F. Outlaw, 51, commanding officer of the Atlanta Army airbase, who was found dead on a runway of the Municipal Airport last night, was killed by lightning, a coroner's jury found today.

The body, found beside the runway by a pilot, showed severe head and chest injuries.

Colonel Outlaw, who served in the last war, was called into active duty about a year ago as a captain, was soon promoted to major, and then to his higher post when placed in command of the air base.

He was a native of Dotsonville, Tenn. He designed the Clarksville (Tenn.) airport, which was named in his honor.

Yanks in Ireland

less courage. But they've got a great deal more than all that: modern tanks and modern tank tactics require of them a consummate mechanical skill, a capacity for lightning decision, teamwork of the highest caliber, a knowledge of weapons and their employment whose very mention would have left the 1918 tank soldier out of breath.

To acquire all that takes time and infinite labor. These men were taken well along the road before they came here. Now, on the narrow Irish roads, across treacherous peat bogs, on mountainsides and over rocky meadows, they are going the rest of the way with a tireless zeal that itself promises success in battle.

Before it came over here, this armored force lost many trained men and replaced them with recruits. Some officers joined just before it sailed. Other men have been lost to Officer Candidate Schools and other special duties since it got here. All the new blood it has acquired must now be fused with the old.

Tanks are the backbone of the armored force and no tank without its crew is more than an insensate, immobile heap of metal, of no more use in battle than a baby carriage. Its crew makes it a weapon of crushing force with which enemy fronts are broken and battles are won.

All Trained for Many Jobs

For that reason, armored force training over here has gone back to the basic detail of perfecting tank crews. When this job is done, every man in every tank will be a driver, every man will be a radio operator, every man a gunner and a machine gunner. The man who is best at each task will perform that task in the normal course. But if he is disabled, there will always be someone in the tight confines of their rolling fort to take over and keep the tank fighting.

No matter what happens, if there are two men still on their feet, they can fight. If only one is left, whether driver, radio man, gunner or tank commander, he can get the tank back home again.

Every man in every crew must know tank tactics, because tanks in battle work along a loosely drawn pattern, each tank seeking its own best ways to support companion tanks in their common fight. This is normally a matter for tank commanders and drivers, but if one of those, or both, is knocked out, the tank can't quit; there must be someone there, down to the last gun loader, who can take things in hand and make the weight and speed and firepower of the tank count as long as it can turn a sprocket.

Now that they're in a strange land, very much like that in which they will have to fight, tank crews must unlearn much of what they learned at home and learn something new in its place. They can't duck into a convenient woods for shelter because there are no woods big enough to hide a wheelbarrow; they can't pull off the roads at will and scatter across country because the green fields are checkered with stone fences and deep bogs lie ready to trap anything heavier and less agile than a goat.

Yet tank doctrine is the same here as anywhere else; tanks must seek what concealment they can find in moving to attack. Bivouacs, even though a medium tank is a bulky and eye-filling article, must be hidden from observation by air or ground. These matters the armored force has tackled along with the others that confront it from hour to hour.

Develop an Eye for Terrain

Like the infantry and the cavalry of the A. E. F., the men of its armored force are develpoing an eye for ground which they could never have acquired at home. They are learning to move in the hollows between low hills, to make the earth enfold them and hide them and lend them what aid they are smart enough to take. For concealment they have developed an amazing ingenuity at camouflage, in which the British have helped them greatly from their own experience.

When a tank outfit is on the move, nothing must stop it short of its objective, whether poor roads or enemy resistance, or the blinding night. Two of these obstacles are at hand here, and tank crews are given their share of contending with both. All crews operate their tanks over all sorts of roads and every platoon must do all its training for one week at night, taking advantage of the few hours of darkness to move in complete blackout along roads, through towns and across country.

While tank crews are developing teamwork of the highest sort, the infantry is going through the tactics peculiar to its function as tank supporters. The armored engineers are strengthening roads and culverts and throwing bridges across the turbulent Irish streams. Reconnaissance troops are scouring the roads on their own special mission of providing sensitive antennae for the great and powerful metal creatures coming along behind.

On the skill and resourcefulness of these reconnaissance units the striking elements of the armored force depend in large measure for success. Ranging far ahead, they take wtih them engineers to estimate the strength of roads and bridges and radio back for parties to come ahead and make them passable. They look for and warn of bogs and marshes. If the force following is to bivouac, they find and report suitable bivouac sites. And, in the face of the enemy, they feel him out, search for soft spots, district his attention, make him uncover his dispositions and, in general, raise all the hell they can.

Training as Combat Teams

The armored force already has begun putting its elements together in combat teams for training in combat procedure. They have worked with platoons of tanks supported by infantry and artillery; they will go on to companies and battalions, organizing them on the basis of typical tasks to be performed and carrying them through, first in dry runs, then with blank ammunition and finally with live ammunition against fixed and moving targets.

You can climb into a medium tank if you like and go along on one of these maneuvers.

You are assisted to the towering cupola, where you can see everything that goes on, something that would be impossible inside the tank, buttoned up and bullet proof as it will be. They tell you the reconnaissance party has gone on ahead and the attacking force will move when it receives a report by radio. From your lofty perch you can see the tops of a few other tanks hidden among the deep wrinkles in the ancient face of Ireland.

Infantry in tin hats and the bulky coveralls of the armored force are sprawled in the gorse behind you. A faint blue haze that smells of engine oil hovers over and around the little hills.

Suddenly your tank snorts and lurches forward and gathers speed and you cling to the rim of the turret with hands and forearms. The infantry falls in behind, well scattered, and you can see the tops of other tanks rising and falling behind the hummocks. You do not see any signals or hear any; everything is done by radio and by the power of training which has taught every crew its exact place in the whole scheme of battle.

Your tank stops and you see one on your right and one on your left move out and forward and then the one on the left stops and your tank starts up again and after a while the one on the right stops and the one on the left starts and then yours stops. You know what this is; there is an antitank gun somewhere ahead and the tanks are stalking it like hunting bird dogs, one or two stopping to fire from cover while the others move on to flank it.

Off in the distance, against a background of cloudy mountains, you can see now and then that other tank teams are doing the same and then your tank stops behind a hill over which you can just see a patch of evergreens which you assume hides the antitank gun. Both other tanks in your team have disappeared behind hills and the infantry creeps forward, passing your tank and fanning out in front. You can see them only briefly as they make their way through the scrubby gorse.

The Infantry Takes the Foe

After a while one of the infantrymen raises up and flings a dummy hand grenade into the evergreens and they all get up and rush in there with their rifles. Then your tanks go on ahead and the infantry fall in behind again.

That maneuver is repeated any number of times, while you alternately stand still and go lurching over the seamy ground from hill to hill. You see artillery behind you, mounted in half-tracks, and more infantry, also in half-tracks. The tanks have covered a good deal of ground when they all halt again and the artillery comes up close and the infantry jumps down from their half-tracks with machine guns and mortars and go through the motions of laying down a terrific fire ahead. The infantry moves forward by short bounds and then a rocket goes up and all the tanks start again and storm ahead through the infantry, the artillery firing in close support.

Then the artillery halts and the tanks fan out and go racing here and there over the fields and finally come together again and their turrets pop open and men scramble out. The battle is over and it has seemed singularly unimpressive but the tank officers all look pleased.

"That would have been real hot," says one of them in a slow Georgia drawl, "if we had been shootin'. You can't see very much, though, because it's our business to hide."

They are hidden so well that only your vantage point in the top of the turret had enabled you to see anything at all.

—:—By Marshall Andrews

In addition to combat training and training in teamwork inside and outside their tanks, the armored force has done what it can to perfect itself in the use of its weapons.

"There's nothing like knowing what you can do with your gun to give you confidence in it," said a veteran of the old cavalry who went into one of the first modern tank outfits in the United States Army.

Get Confidence by Firing Them

Not only have the men fired their rifles and pistols and machine guns and submachine guns on fixed and combat ranges, but tank and artillery gunners have had a crack at moving targets with their big guns. Before they have finished, everybody will have fired from moving tanks and moving half-tracks at moving targets.

When the armored force came over here it cut itself loose from all help it had from fully equipped shops in keeping its vehicles and its weapons in order. It is entirely on its own now; its maintenance and repairs must be done with its own field equipment, a job which it has faced with commendable self-reliance. So far, everything is shipshape and indications are that everything will remain that way.

They have their job cut out for them, these tough young tank soldiers from America. But it is a job they like; they take to it with an appetite for hard work which, before this war is won, will make every tank corps man of 1918 want to get out his faded red, blue and yellow shoulder patch and wear it again in sheer pride that he was a tank man.

TOMORROW: What has happened to the modern artilleryman.

Chicken, Peaches Are the Current Victory Specials

Fried chicken swimming in sliced peaches—

That may sound funny but that's the prescription or the equivalent thereof, for folks wishing to cooperate in the Agriculture Department's Victory Food Special program, beginning today.

From July 16 to July 25 broilers and fryers are the "special." A second special—peaches—also begins today, continuing until August 5.

Since last spring Roy F. Hendrickson, agricultural marketing administrator, has been designating various edibles as victory specials for the purpose of bolstering consumption of foods as they come into season.

Wholesale commission and produce merchants queried yesterday of The Post said supplies of peaches and chickens are plentiful

Huge Tax Bill Goes to House

Knutson said he would ask that the proposed 45 per cent combined normal and surtax rate on corporations be cut down to 40 per cent. At the same time he plans to ask that the flat 87½ per cent excess profits tax be increased to "90 per cent or better."

Representative Treadway (Republican) of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile filed "supplemental views" with the majority report, announcing his support of the bill as a whole but, like Knutson, hitting at proposed corporate rates.

Treadway said a 45 per cent combined normal and surtax rate "will be a death blow to many corporations which have no excess profits and which will have a difficult enough time, even under a 40 per cent rate, to continue in operation." He said he would vote to recommit the bill to provide a 40 per cent combined rate, plus a 90 per cent flat tax on excess profits.

Treadway likewise slapped at the proposed $500 exemption for single persons as "too low." He said he favored a $600 exemption for single persons, or half of the $1200 exemption for married couples provided in the bill.

Before the House Rules Committee, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee disclosed that the Administration preferred the bill, short of revenue as it is, to a retail sales tax that would raise it to $8,500,000,000.

"I hope you make it plain to the House when you discuss the bill that the Administration is responsible (for the revenue deficiency)," Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia said.

Doughton replied "No," when Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, asked if "it is not politics and politics alone that stands in the way of a sales tax."

Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia, recently drew an amendment providing a 5 per cent retail sales tax to raise 2½ billion dollars, exempting only Government purchases. He declined to submit it to a committee vote when a poll of House sentiment indicated a majority against it.

Later the Rules Committee heard Representative Mundt (Republican) of South Dakota request a semiopen rule which would permit amendments increasing revenue, but seal those taxes already in the bill. But in executive session the committee backed Doughton's request for a closed rule, the usual procedure on tax measures.

In its formal report to the House, the Ways and Means Committee said its bill would produce only $4,026,000,000 in the fiscal year 1943 but in a full year of operation would yield $6,144,000,000, bringing total annual Federal tax collections to 23 billion dollars.

Debt of 129 Billion Forecast

Estimating 1943 expenditures in excess of 73 billion dollars, the committee said that even with the proposed taxes a deficit of 52 billion dollars and a public debt of 129 billion dollars is in prospect on June 30 next year.

"At best our national credit will be subjected to a severe strain," said the report. "To the extent that our tax revenues are increased, the strain will be lessened."

As reported, the bill raised revenue from the three main tax categories as follows:

Corporation income and excess profits taxes, $2,479,400,000.

Individual income taxes, $2,906,300,000.

Miscellaneous internal revenue taxes, $758,200,000.

Grand total, $6,139,900,000.

Widow Describes Voyage With Death

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 15.—Idly, almost impassively thumbing through the pages of a log that bore the story of her tragic cruise to the South Seas two years ago, a thin, saddened woman told for the first time today of the harrowing episodes of the voyage of the 28-foot yacht Wing On.

She was Fern Thompson, now 23, a widow and mother of two tots of two and four. Buried at sea somewhere off the Fiji Islands was her husband, Chester, who was 21 when he died during the last stages of a struggle against starvation aboard the drifting, rudderless Wing On.

Dead, too, were Mrs. Thompson's other two companions on that 105-day nightmare of the South Pacific, Dalton Conly, 28, and his young wife, Eve of Oakland.

"Yes, I remember. But I'd rather not talk about it though, if you don't mind."

This was in answer to a question whether she remembered the day her husband died. That was on November 7, 1940, 17 days before Mrs. Thompson, lone survivor, was rescued.

Asked what incident stood out in her memory, she thought a moment.

"I know. It was the day I fell overboard. I had cooked biscuits that day." The log showed it was August 21, just seven days after the gay little party had set out from San Pedro, Calif.

She revealed that she couldn't swim. Her husband jumped into the ocean, and with Conly's help, rescued her.

Slowly another memory—of the day the Conlys tied her to a mast to help man the sails. She was too weak to stand alone. This was a few days after her husband died.

It was just a few more days before Mrs. Thompson was left alone. For the Conlys died——

Today was the first time she had seen the log since her rescue by a missionary in the half sunk Wing On near a reef off Visogo. Her attorney, Robert Neeb, jr., and members of the family have been trying by easy stages to bring her back to normal. They had quoted passages from the log . . . that was all.

Hard luck befell the Wing On from the outset. The first day out the anchor was lost and the party put back.

The Wing On had set sail for Hawaii and Samoa. It missed both. A month's food stores soon were depleted. Land could not be sighted. "Help" was scrawled on the sails.

It came too late for Thompson and the Conlys, and just in time for Fern. As the missionary put it in a message, "she had lived, indeed, in the reek of death for these weeks."

Roberto M. Ortiz

By the death of former President Roberto M. Ortiz of Argentina, the New World has lost an ardent and devoted advocate of inter-American solidarity and the United States a true friend. It is a fair presumption that had Senor Ortiz not been stricken by ill health two years ago, and thus been forced to relinquish the active conduct of his high office, Argentina's foreign policies during the present critical period would have followed a different and, from our viewpoint, a far happier and wiser course than has been the case. Certainly at no time has there been any question as to how the great majority of Argentineans feel about the struggle for survival now raging in the world. They are fervently pro-democratic and anti-Axis. They have repeatedly made known their conviction that their country should do everything possible to further the interests of the United Nations for the simple reason that an Axis victory would inevitably mean the destruction of Argentina's freedom and independence.

Senor Ortiz was an exponent of that realistic point of view. His successor, President Ramon Castillo, is not. Despite the tragic experience of one nation after another, he continues to hug the illusion that the wisest course in the present crisis is a policy of neutrality. He has therefore seen to it that Argentina continues to harbor Axis missions in her midst and recently went so far as to knuckle under to Germany's proclamation of a blockade of the East Coast of the United States—a decision which has shocked the people of the United States. Under the circumstances the long period of illness of Senor Ortiz, now followed by his death, constitutes a tragedy of continental dimensions.

Sail-Ho!

It may interest you—as it certainly interested us—to know that, so far from being extinct, the sailing ship is having a boom. Anyway, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has agreed to lend 10 million dollars or thereabouts for the construction of 100 new wooden windjammers for the inter-American trade, and their cargoes will be principally foodstuffs. The idea, it seems, is to release the regular freighters for more important war jobs. Mr. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who made the announcement, says that the whole thing is just an emergency project and admits that as soon as the war is ended the sailing ships will have outlived their usefulness and will have become obsolete again. But of this we wouldn't be too sure. We have been singing the requiem of the sailing ship these 30 years and more—and always prematurely.

Vichy's Words

"France," said Gaston Henry-Haye, Vichy's Ambassador in Washington, on Bastille Day, "will remain faithful to her traditional friendships." We should like to believe him. But in view of Vichy's actions, the sentiments expressed by Pierre Laval's spokesman in the United States must be set down as far more magniloquent than accurate. On the very day and almost at the very hour that M. Henry-Haye spoke, the Department of State made public the results of an exchange of views between this country and the Laval government which made it clear once again that as between the interests of the Axis and the wishes of France's traditional friends, Vichy always chooses the former.

On July 3, it was revealed, President Roosevelt proposed to Vichy that the nine French warships now at Alexandria be removed for safe haven to some port in the United States or to some neutral American port. That proposal was turned down. So was a second proposal that the ships in question be sent to Martinique. Instead, Vichy suggested that they be sent to a French port. Were this to take place, it would mean that whenever he wanted to, Hitler could lay his hands on the nine ships, most likely with the full consent and cooperation of Vichy.

Vichy's record from the beginning has been one of cooperating with France's enemies while placing every obstacle in the path of those nations whose victory alone can bring about France's salvation. We need only contrast Vichy's craven surrender to the Japanese in Indo-China with the fight made against the British in Syria and Madagascar. But then M. Henry-Hayé's chief, Pierre Laval, declared only the other day, "I hope for a German victory," and we assume he meant it, since his very life depends on it.

For a spokesman of a government headed by Laval to speak of France's fidelity to her "traditional friendships" is to assume that the American people are hopelessly ignorant of the true facts of the situation and can be seduced by honeyed words. We have no reason to doubt that the historic friendship between the people of France and the people and Government of the United States is unbroken. But the Vichy regime headed by Laval is no more representative of France than a Paris streetwalker is representative of France's womanhood.

Midway

The effect of our victory at Midway upon our territorial security was so profound that the battle was worthy of a peal of thanksgiving from every church steeple in America. No fewer than 80 vessels made up the Japanese armada. The immediate object was to capture Midway, the western limit of our territorial defense zone. Thence an attack would conceivably have spread out fanwise against our bastions at Dutch Harbor, Hawaii, and the Panama Canal. But the Japanese found our fighting services "ware and waiting," as Sir Henry Newbolt described the English as they lay ready for the Spanish armada. Gone was the lack of alertness which enabled the Japanese to knock out our aircraft on the ground in the Philippines and in Hawaii. None was on the ground at Midway when the Japanese were ready to take off from the carriers for their mid-Pacific objective. Our airmen had spotted the enemy 700 miles off Midway, and our aircraft went to meet the foe. And they smote him hip and thigh with such concentrated fury that in three days the armada had been more than decimated and the rest broken up in full retreat. It was as if a mighty wind had hit and scattered this mammoth thrust to make the whole of the Pacific Ocean into a Japanese lake.

But it is not the terrific loss that the Japanese sustained that will be pondered in reading the full naval communique. That had been more or less known. What will make our people marvel is the account of the exploits of our airmen, who, after giving the warning, lashed at the carrier fleet with such deadly effect that after 24 hours of battle that fleet had to turn about. If the carriers had not retreated, a 50 per cent loss—four out of an estimated eight—might have been higher. As it was, the Zeros returning from an ineffectual bombing of Midway were deprived of deck space, and many of the pilots were drowned. The dash and daring of this initial attack are beyond praise. But equally meritorious was the manner in which our airmen stayed with the armada. For a time the carrier fleet was lost, but one of the flight leaders "made an accurate estimate of the situation" and located the enemy. He and his fellows bombed the retreating vessels, and none got back. Indeed, the sole survivor of the entire squadron of 30 officers and men was an ensign. Still our aviators continued to range the ocean for the remnants of the Japanese fleet. And it was in this follow-up operation, which continued till the sixth day of the battle, that the Army lost that splendid soldier, Maj. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker.

The Navy communique seeks impartially to distribute the praise for the victory of Midway. That is most commendable. In operations of this nature, where all arms of the fighting services are engaged, postbattle inquests often lead to friction. No nation at war seems to be free of them. In Britain the inquest over Dunkerque and Crete has never been concluded, and reports of interservice dissension over Midway are likewise rife. Such rivalry can probably never be ended. And, kept in bounds, it is as healthy as the rivalry of competitors in a sporting event. It will be kept in bounds if every man in our fighting services keeps two things firmly in mind. First, he is a comrade in arms with every other man in no matter what branch of the service against a common foe. Secondly, victories can come in a war of these dimensions only by perfect cooperation. No matter how valorous a man may be, without organization and harmony there can be no victory. There is credit enough at Midway to add luster to the glory of every arm in our fighting services. It was an all-American victory.

Yet the fact cannot be gainsaid that this was a naval victory gained by the air arm. Accordingly, the case for promoting more of our air officers to positions in the high command of our Navy—both in Washington and at sea—will gain an additional impetus. In this respect the Army is well in the lead in recognizing the need of promoting air officers. General Arnold, for instance, is the operational head of the Army air arm; whereas Admiral Towers, the ranking air chief in the Navy, is restricted to an advisory function in operations. It is surprising that Admiral King is so laggard. When he became Chief of Naval Operations, he was hailed as our first air-minded chief. The fact seems to be that he is air-minded but not air-officer-minded. Perhaps the great victory at Midway will make room at the top for some of our air officers. For what the air arm did was to save our Pacific Coast from attack and possible invasion; while, as Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons on July 2, it relieved the position in Australia, the Indian Ocean and Egypt and definitely altered the balance of power in the Pacific in our favor.

New Tax Bill

The corporate tax provisions were bad enough before the final changes were made, but in the bill as reported by the Ways and Means Committee they are positively harmful. Under the new schedules corporations are confronted by taxes that would make serious inroads on their working capital at a time when many concerns need increased funds for carrying larger inventories or for expansion purposes. At the same time, many other firms that have been injured, not aided, by the war might, as Representative Knutson warns, be put out of business by the extremely high rates of the proposed normal and surtax levies on profits. Undoubtedly a good many companies—and not all of them small—would find it necessary to cut or discontinue dividends. Indirectly these extraordinarily high normal and surtaxes would take a disproportionately heavy toll of small investors who depend on receipts from dividends.

However, the plight of these little people could be dismissed as one of the inevitable casualties of war if the Ways and Means Committee had shown any disposition to spread the new tax burden at all equitably. Its failure to do so is largely responsible for the defects of the tax program and for its inadequacy as a revenue producer. Thus, omission from the bill of general sales tax proposals has caused the committee to rely primarily upon increasing the levies on corporations and individuals already subject to recent heavy increase in income taxes. The result is to emphasize the inequities of a tax system that leaves largely untouched the income of the great majority of the wage earners who have been the chief beneficiaries of the war boom.

Even the withholding tax—ostensibly designed to facilitate income tax collections—is a device for getting more money from individual income tax payers. For the 5 per cent withholding tax to be collected in 1943 will not be credited against tax payments until 1944. In other words, the taxpayer will have to find the means to pay taxes due in 1943, and in addition submit to a 5 per cent deduction from his income as an advance collection on future taxes. The large employer at the same time will find his bookkeeping costs a good deal more complicated and expensive as a result of the withholding tax provisions.

With a stupendous deficit of 56 billion dollars in prospect, this puny tax bill would cut just about 4 billion dollars from that total deficit in the fiscal year 1943. In a full year of operation the Ways and Means Committee estimates that its yield would not exceed $6,100,000,000. Where does Congress expect to get the 52 billion dollars for which no provision is made in taxes? Not from the savings of the people, with the Treasury trying—so far unsuccessfully—to raise monthly sales of war bonds to one billion dollars under its voluntary plan. The Ways and Means Committee has sedulously avoided the two proposals that would most effectively reduce the amount of necessary inflationary borrowing resulting from sales of bonds on credit to commercial banks. They are a system of compulsory savings combined with general sales taxation heavy enough to curb consumer spending.

Make Ready

The spotting of an escaped murderer by an auxiliary policeman is great testimony to wartime volunteer work as well as to our auxiliaries in Washington. For it was Auxiliary Goetzinger's conscientious approach to his spare-time occupation that resulted in the capture of John Eugene Eklund, who has since been found guilty of second degree murder. Goetzinger was able to make the identification because he had made certain of the characteristics of the escaped man. In these days when the welfare of the community and, indeed, of the Nation requires volunteers, the example should act as a stimulus. All volunteers may not be able to do such a spectacular service, but, with the same application to their job that Goetzinger showed, they can deserve well of their community in other respects.

HANGING THE DOOR

A door is like a wall, but not a wall.
To say what shall be held, and what held back,
Let it swing readily, though not to all.
Let it stand wide, or never show a crack.
To set the limits is an act of mind;
To keep them movable, an act of will.
Let it be strong and balanced, and designed
For comfort at the jamb and latch and sill.

Now out of hillside timbers, iron, and lime
We have wrought shape and substance to a place.
We have let out a bucket into time
And hauled to earth a cottageful of space.
Eternity has roof and walls and floor
And—for the freedom that we love—a door!

Facts About Britain

In Sunday's Post, July 12, appeared a feature article of unusual interest and significance—a collection of "Facts About Britain at War." I do not know whether you published the article to answer the current whispering campaign against the British war effort; if so, you succeeded admirably.

After reading your article in the morning, it was particularly interesting to listen to Edward Murrow in the evening, speaking from London and giving thrilling instances of the continuing heroism on the battered British Isles.

When one reads of the English, with one out of every five homes either damaged or destroyed, and with such strict rationing that a woman who buys two pairs of stockings a month and one apron a year has no coupons left to buy other clothes, still sending garments and medical supplies to their Russian allies, one can but feel a little ashamed of a brand of patriotism which has developed here since Pearl Harbor. "We've got to help ourselves now. We can't help the English." How often one hears that! Friends who work for the British War Relief tell me that it has markedly affected their supplies of garments, etc. for shipment to England.

Articles like the one you published on "Facts About Britain At War" should help to remedy this situation.

Give a License Plate

In this day and time when everyone is giving what he can to help win the war, it occurred to me that there is one thing every car owner could give—one license plate.

This could be done not only in Washington but all over the United States. We Washingtonians could set the pace if the idea is publicized and properly promoted.

Federal Pay Raises

The wage of third-class classified labor in Government employ (lowest paid per diem employe in Government service) was fixed at $3.84 per day in 1940. Based on a year of 261 working days and holidays, his per annum earnings totaled $1002.24. The clerk in this same year received $1440, based on a 360-day year of $4 per day. Both were, and are, entitled to the same leave (vacation) and sick leave privileges.

Now, as a result of Government-approved pay raises, labor receives $4.96 per day, together with $7.44 for Saturday overtime work, or in a year, $1681.44.

The clerk making $1440 in 1940, now receives in addition to this base wage, in field service only, overtime pay for Saturday of $6.21, bringing his present per annum earnings to $1762.92.

There has been no added burden of responsibility or other material change in the work of the laborer, who needs not be even literate. The clerk, however, has had to assume additional responsibilities thrust on him by the expansion of Governmental agencies engaged in war production. It follows, therefore, that the laborer's wage was not increased in deference to added responsibility, but rather to enable him to obtain his needs in inflated markets.

No notice has been taken of the fact that the clerk's market is the same as the laborer's. His cost of living, too, has risen, and just as much for him in proportion to his 1940 salary, as has the laborer's cost of living in proportion to his 1940 wage.

Leaving reward for increased assumption of responsibility aside, does it not follow that one should be enabled to meet increased financial responsibility as well as the other?

This situation is known to Congress, and they have proposed a survey of the cost of living. This survey was to be used as a basis for the proper adjustment of Government employes' salaries.

This proposal dates back to the end of the calendar year 1941, and several surveys have been made, indicating that the cost of living has risen 20 to 33 per cent. Despite these surveys, action on pay raises for Government clerks is still withheld by a legislative body that seemingly listens only to organized groups of powerfully supported workers. Sportsmanship, that word that Congress kicks around so much, demands that some action be taken on this matter, and this action expedited.

Stokes Scores Again

Here we are, urging school children to collect waste paper—so many pounds will make so many cartridges to be used in winning the war—and at the same time a United States Senator causes the Government Printing Office to use more than a ton of valuable paper in an effort to elect a friend to office in high places. It does not matter whether the envelopes and the reprint speech were sent through the mails; the fact is that precious paper was scattered and much of it is gone. Moreover, the time of employes in the Government Printing Office was wasted.

Dillard Stokes has scored again with this exposure of public betrayal. His splendid work, tearing away masks from anti-American publications and turning their editors and publishers over for prosecution or public scorn—both in some instances—is the best bit of newspaper work I have seen in many a day, and, believe it or not, I know something about the Fourth Estate.

If it were possible for the Distinguished Service Cross to be awarded a civilian, then Stokes should be the recipient of one.

Music By Transcription

Your Sunday editorial, "Off the Record," treats facetiously what has become a real bread and butter problem with the professional musician. Regardless of what your editorial writer thinks, James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, is charged by the membership with the heavy responsibility of being vigilant in asserting rights and protecting and developing employment opportunities. The policy of the union on transcription records was outlined, debated and accepted at the national convention held recently in Dallas, Tex.

Musicians, I think you will agree, can be logically grouped under the heading of highly skilled workers. It takes years of study and training to acquire the knowledge essential to a professional musician. With no incentive to become a professional musician, few youths would make music a career. Their love for it would make them good amateurs, but most would not train themselves to meet professional standards.

The organized musicians are not disposed to bar the paths of technological progress; but neither can they be expected to stand by and quietly accept conditions which reduce their employment opportunities to an empty reservoir. Let us look at the facts realistically.

1. There are 550 radio stations in the United States which exist—so far as music goes—entirely on canned melody or transcriptions. Many of these could afford to hire live musicians but, for economic reasons, prefer the status quo. Union members get approximately three million dollars annually for record royalties, but the working musicians lose by this method approximately 100 million dollars a year in reduced employment opportunities. Piped-in music from a central source and so-called juke boxes create an unemployment potential that is a menace to the general welfare of our membership. We create, in other words, an opposition or competition that benefits the few but injures the many.

2. The drastic reduction in the WPA appropriation by the Government throws an added responsibility upon our organization to care for its unemployed. The music project of the WPA must necessarily be curtailed and some 7000 musicians helped in 1941-42 at the $24 per week scale will be denied this subsistence wage. These men were available for parades, war bond rallies and other patriotic gatherings at a minimum of cost. In World War I the Federal Government hired these musicians at the full scale of $12 per day or $84 per week.

3. Your sports columnist in the Sunday issue inferentially criticizes union musicians who sought employment at the all-star game in Cleveland, but who were replaced by the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band, with stand-by money being refused to union members. Does he know that both the Army and the Navy are prohibited by regulation and law from competing with legitimate civilian business? Is he aware that even Westbrook Pegler defends the union's stand-by policy? Does he condone the policy of the Army and Navy in forcing unemployment upon civilian workers? War Department records will show that this regulation was enforced to stop the Twenty-ninth Division's musical comedy, "Snap It Up Again," preventing it from touring and playing Washington.

4. Union musicians have played camps, naval establishments, USO rallies, war bond meetings and other patriotic gatherings gratuitously since war was declared; most military units have had the benefit of prestige and name bands without charge. Music that would have cost upward of five million dollars at the regular scale has been supplied to soldiers and sailors without cost. Has any other business or profession given as generously as the organized musicians for those in uniform?

5. One request from Nelson A. Rockefeller, Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, involved work contributed by musicians which would have cost more than one million dollars if paid for at the regular scale.

Musicians, like all workers, have a constitutional right to withhold their talent from any enterprise that they conscientiously feel affects their personal interests adversely. In the larger sense, Mr. Petrillo reflects the voice of the organized membership when he issues the decree barring transcription records, except for the war agencies and such purposes as the Government feels advance the war effort.

The Post Impressionist

By Pacific Post

Noumea, New Caledonia.

Hi ya, Mom, Pop and All the Rest:

Here I am, one of the few American women in Noumea, New Caledonia.

You see, it is all right to tell you now—that's official. Our Red Cross task force (only six of us so far), was with the first troops to land here. It was almost doubtful if we would arrive, as our little Jap friends didn't want us here, so you can just imagine the excitement on the last lap of our trip. Even if we made the waters O. K., we didn't know just what would greet us on our arrival. But we got here without a bit of trouble, and outside of a few inconveniences we are having a swell time.

You'd die laughing if you could see us, with our tin hats, gas masks and tin dishes lined up for mess or sitting on the ground eating. And then at night with the mosquito netting over our beds—I never would have believed it, but I'm getting a kick out of it all.

Had an awful time this morning with my dishes. We line up with our tin plates, spoons and cups and take turn washing our "tools," first in a dish pan the size of an ash can filled with boiling-hot, soapy water; then we dunk 'em in a second can of soapy water and rinse 'em in a third. The trick is to keep from dunking your hands in the boiling water along with the dishes.

We are now set up in our building, and Tuesday we had a grand opening, with the General and his staff, the consuls and all the local officials here. My work is getting under way, and in addition to my secretarial job I am hostess and receptionist, too. I try to make the boys comfortable, talk to them, pass out games, writing paper, and will pass out books to read as soon as some arrive.

The place is crowded today, so many of the boys from the bush get passes on a Saturday and Sunday.

This morning when I was coming in, you should have heard that bunch of fellows—25 of them hanging around just waiting for the door to open. "Here comes teacher—school is open," they called. And if I don't get here by 9—whew! I just can't do that to them.

This is the only recreation center on the island, and everyone wants to talk to an American. Have seen more girls' pictures and those of wives, mothers and kiddies, too. It is all fine until telegrams come from home about deaths in families. It is our job to tell the poor fellows, and that is really tough. Had one yesterday. His mother had died. He came back three different times—just sat here and cried. It is hard on the boys to get news like that. They try to hold up, but—well, I can see now why the Red Cross sends women workers out. I feel as if I were doing a little to help, even if it is only to help them "unload" their minds.

((Time out now—there is a soldier trying to play checkers by himself, so I guess I'll take him on for a game.)

Later: Of course he beat me two games. Broke in on a lonesome youngster the other night playing solitaire. We shifted to Rummy and I beat him two games. He taught me two new card games, too, so I could pass 'em on to the boys.

I asked the Field Director to get me a camera over in Australia, but the catch to that is, there is no paper in town to print the pictures on and no films. If we can get the films and paper, some of the boys will try to set up a dark room to develop them in. I'll guarantee when you see the pictures you won't believe them. The natives love to pose and what a sight they are! The women look Oriental but speak French and wear wrap around skirts or a little Mother Hubbard number. The men just wear shorts—some of them with white paint around their eyes for a monocle. The hair-do is something! They have the ends of their hair dyed the most hideous shade of red and they all are barefoot.

Yes, I am still the local "Beatrice Fairfax." One boy came in this morning to ask me if I thought he should have a gold front tooth put in. The dentist wanted to do it, but he asked me first to see if I thought his girl would like it when he got home.

I did go to a big party the other night—orchestra, dancing in the patio, with the local officials' wives in evening clothes—and I had on a uniform; but then they say a uniform is formal in war times.

The tropical nights are beautiful—the moon over the ocean on one side, with roller-coaster mountains on the other three, and millions of stars—some that seem to shine as brightly as the moon back home. There is a little hill of green grass near by where we can sit with the victrola playing. Really, in spite of the inconvenience of dish-washing, this is a swell place.

You should see my room since my birthday party the other day. You'd swear it was a canteen—eggs, coffee, fruit of all kinds, candy and cookies—just like "an apple for the teacher"—and all from the boys in the Army and Navy.

The local people are friendly to all the Americans here, so 'bye now, and don't worry. With the Army and Navy we have, there is not a thing to worry about.

EDNA (PATTERSON).

Note: Edna Patterson is a native of Washington and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Patterson, sr., 505 K Street Northeast. She was assigned to Australia as a member of an ... erican Red Cross task force in January and was transferred in May to her present post in Noumea, New Caledonia, a French colony located about halfway between Australia and the Fiji Islands.

The Preparation Of The Western Front

THE RECOGNITION of General de Gaulle as the leader of the Fighting French is no mere diplomatic gesture which has little practical military significance in relation to the great battles in Russia and in the Mediterranean. It is on the contrary a necessary and critical move in the development of the Western Front in Europe. For in discussing the Western Front we must remember that in the first great phase of the operation on land we shall not be invading the homeland of the enemy and fighting, therefore, against a whole people defending their homes.

LIPPMANN

We shall be entering territory where the great mass of the people must rise up to help us as fast as we establish strong points around which they can rally and as soon as we can place weapons in their hands.

INDEED the whole conception of a Western Front is based on the conviction that though Hitler has defeated the armies of France, he has not only failed to conquer the French nation but has in fact made the French more desperately and implacably his enemies than they ever were in 1939 and 1940. For if Hitler had won France and the other occupied countries to his empire, if they accepted it and were willing to defend it against us, a Western Front would mean a war against Europe and not against Nazi Germany alone.

In fact the Western Front is a campaign in which by smashing the occupying forces somewhere, the British-American forces become the spearhead of a war with and by Europe against Nazi Germany. The ferocity with which Hitler is oppressing the occupied peoples is indisputable proof that he knows that they are his enemies and our Allies. It is proof, in fact a confession by Hitler himself, that though the occupied nations are now unarmed, they are in fact an enormous reservoir of trained and furious men who will pour forth to join us wherever and whenever we punch a hole in the dam that holds them back.

THE HISTORY of our relations with France during the two years since the armistice is a long and complicated story which we may now leave to the historians to judge. Our present relations with France are determined by two great developments which have now matured. The one is that we are now committed, as of course we were not at the time of the French armistice, to total war against Hitler, and that our power to wage war against Hitler is becoming formidable.

To the French people, who can have no use for the mere good wishes of a distant non-combatant, the sense of resisting Hitler lies in the steady advance of our mounting power in the direction of Europe. They have seen that we have accepted the heavy losses of the submarine war against secondary shipping in our own waters in order to concentrate our naval forces to insure the movement of primary shipping across the Atlantic to our advanced bases.

THE other critical development is marked by the change of name from Free French to Fighting French. This change of name is of the highest significance. For the defeat of France in 1940 was in part due, and the capitulation of France at Bordeaux was predominantly due, to the fact that Frenchmen were so divided against themselves that they could not unite against Hitler. This state of incipient civil war has paralyzed the French, even including the French outside of France.

Factionalism which was the disease of the French in the last days of the Third Republic has now been sufficiently submerged by the two year's experience with Hitler's occupation. The ideological fear that the wrong Frenchmen would govern France when France had been liberated has worn off and is being replaced by the French national spirit. When it is expedient to tell the whole story of the events which have led up to the recognition of General de Gaulle as leader of the Fighting French, we shall see that it has involved the gradual victory among the mass of Frenchmen of patriotism over factionalism.

THE OPENING of a western front is like the cutting of a tunnel through a mountain. Cutting operations must take place at both ends with a view to meeting somewhere inside; the military forces which are preparing to enter the continent or its approaches must aim to make a sure contact with the French and the other peoples within and behind Hitler's lines. When the action is, as military men say, committed, then the military operations from the outside and the national uprising from the inside will be like the two blades of the same scissors.

The form of the battles will be unlike any yet seen in Europe in this war. For whereas Hitler has had his fifth columns here and there, the national rebellion of whole peoples in alliance with armies of liberation will be a military phenomenon for which there may be historical analogies but for which there is no conventional military doctrine which can be slavishly applied.

THE PREPARATION of this front is, therefore, a close and complex combination of strategy and tactics and logistics but also and always, because this is the other blade of the scissors, of political action. It is evident that whatever else they may be neglecting on the home front or on secondary fronts, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill are in fact remembering where the main decisions in this war will be taken, and that the two blades of the scissors are being made longer and sharper.

The present condition of the military blade is a secret which cannot be discussed. But the political blade can be. The great question here is what measures to take in respect to Frenchmen in France and of the Germans in Germany in order to undermine the position of Hitler.

THE FRENCH question is how far it is wise to tolerate collaboration with Hitler, just when it will be expedient to force all Frenchmen to take their stand definitely for us or against us. It is clear that at some point, certainly no later than the opening of the western front, we shall force the issue. It is clear too that we have reached the point in our preparations where there is nothing to be lost and much to be gained by putting all Frenchmen on notice that the day is approaching when we shall force the issue.

The time may not be far off when we shall find it advisable to tell the French collaborationists that there will be individual priorities in many matters of vital personal interest to them based on the time when they cease to collaborate, and that their period of grace and tolerance is running out. They will not mistake that for an idle threat when they remember that we shall have influence with our Allies, the Fighting French, and that we shall have an army in France, and the control of the means of life.

THE GERMAN question is how far we shall go in holding the German nation responsible for the crimes of the German government. The answer to that question is not too complicated. We could not and we should not and will not punish the German nation, the living and the unborn. On the other hand we cannot whitewash those who support the regime while it promises them victory and then abandon it only when it has been brought down. To take that line would be to offer adult Germans today a loaded choice: Either to become the Herrenvolk under Hitler, or failing that to enjoy prosperity and freedom and equality among the peoples they tried and failed to subjugate.

The true line is to say to the Germans that we shall favor those who earn the right to be favored; that individuals, groups, cities, provinces will receive the kind of treatment which their actions warrant as the war comes to its crisis in Europe; that those who resist and rebel first and first rejoin the civilized peoples will be the first to be repaid in the true coin of civilization—in bread and peace and freedom.

Thus we shall not have to judge the German people as a whole on abstract moral and even metaphysical grounds: we shall leave it to the Germans to determine their own fate by the parts they play in deciding the outcome of the war. We shall, in other words, be the friends of those who care enough for their own freedom to take risks in recovering it.

Congressional X-Cards

THE RECENT criticism of Congress has been widely debated but most of the discussion which followed the original blast has been mere wind and witticism. Inasmuch as the attack received much space, I herewith present a letter from the wife of a Senator, who offers, I think, the best reply that has been made. She says:

"I read with interest your two articles dealing first with Senator La Follette's resentment of the general attack by the press on Congress because of the possession of X-cards and your further remarks concerning Ray Clapper's lofty comments.

"Members of Congress and their families are accustomed to criticism. That is part of public life and men who cannot take criticism had better not enter politics. I am afraid that the burning resentment that members of Congress and, I may add, 100 per cent of their wives, feel toward the recent journalistic orgy is directed toward what was a flagrant example of dishonest reporting and misrepresentation.

"Most of the men who joined the pack would scorn anyone who lifted a sentence from context. The Washington newsmongers did precisely a parallel thing when they lifted that X-card story from background. Every newspaperman in Washington should know that an enormous part of every Congressman's mail is composed of requests from constituents for service for themselves, their State or their city in the way of representation before some Government agency. Sometimes the requests are unreasonable but frequently they are the result of definite need for assistance. It is perfectly legitimate business. The least impressive Congressman is in Washington representing 200,000 supposedly sovereign people. In addition to his legislative work he must represent them to the Federal Government. Much of this work is done by a personal visit to one or more Government departments. I have known important matters to take several conferences.

"Congress has no provision for (local) official transportation. When a Congressman visits an executive department on official business he either hires a cab or drives his own car. When a representative of the executive department visits a Congressman he has only to leap into an official car, operated by unrationed gas from a Government garage. I have no objection to even minor officials having these conveniences, but I look with a jaundiced eye on any reporter who, knowing that it is so, raised a great furor about the X-cards for members of Congress. It is definitely a little yellow journalism and I suggest that a few of the more reputable members of your profession remove their contemptuous gazes from Congress and turn it on their fellows. There were something like 18,000 X-cards in Washington, but all the noise was made about 200 issued to Congress. I think there is a brazen drive on to discredit Congress.

"The people do not know very much about the way these things are operated, nor would the average man respond to misrepresentation with a thoughtful response of 'well, my Congressman must have a lot of official business in Washington.' The radio commentators and news writers held up the members of Congress as a lot of cheats and chiselers and, in my opinion, they did it because it was a good story and they would not suffer from recriminations at the hands of Congress that they might from some Government agency. It seems to be intellectually fashionable just now to attack Congress. It was not so long ago that it was intellectually fashionable to be unpatriotic and attack everything that was wrong in this country, ignoring what was right.

"The more I listen to the fast talkers around Washington, the more highly I regard the members of Congress. They may not be supermen, but they will compare favorably with any group in this country. In the last analysis, they are the ones who are important, they and the quiet people back in the quiet places who know what they want. Most of them work hard, long hours, day after day.

"So long as we have enough gas to issue X-cards for official use, I think anyone who thinks Congress should not be included is not quite bright.

"I have a high regard for Ray Clapper and confidence in his intellectual integrity. I doubt, however, whether his reputation for judicial writing was enhanced by his two ill-tempered outbursts. Ray recently returned from India and China, where our supply of gasoline would look like eternal security. Ray used quite a bit of gas. It was nice to read what he had to say, but the front was being covered adequately by men on the job. His suggestion of some Webster-Haynes debates would, doubtless, not be well received in other quarters. Congress has, of late, been showing a good deal of restraint in the interest of national unity, but Ray should know there are many good debates going on day after day on matters of importance. I go along with him usually, but he lowered his standards there. Sincerely yours,

Britishers At War

By J. B. Priestley

Civilians Live Rationed Lives

EVERY TIME I talk with anybody who has just returned from the United States he or she always asks me to stress in my broadcasts what war means to the average British citizen. I am always told that folks overseas still do not understand our war conditions. They imagine, I am told, that we are still living one kind of life, when in fact we are living a very different kind of life. You ought to make all this quite clear, these people just back from the United States say to me.

I therefore am going to correct, simply and forcibly, some misconceptions that I am told by our most recent arrivals from the United States are fairly common overseas.

FIRST, clothes rationing: I myself read some months ago in a famous American weekly an article that gave quite a false impression of rationing in Britain. I don't mean that the writer deliberately misrepresented the situation. But I do mean that in order to be amusing and dramatic the writer distorted the whole situation.

Thus, for instance, he suggested that second-hand clothes are not rationed as new clothes are. He had found one or two shops that were really selling new clothes that passed as second-hand clothes; therefore this rationing of clothes was a farce.

This is completely misleading. Clothes rationing here isn't a farce at all. It has worked well. Nobody in my family, nobody I have ever talked to, has ever tried to get around the clothes rationing by buying second-hand garments that are really new ones. I have no hesitation in saying that this suggestion was nonsense.

SECONDLY, the rationing of food: It is true that at one time a fairly large black market existed which enabled the well-to-do to eat pretty well. But that black market is rapidly dwindling and, it must be remembered, it never did affect the country at large very much. It operated chiefly in and for the West End of London. The West End is no more Great Britain than Fifth Avenue is the United States.

Probably the best way to give you some notion of our food rationing is to be direct and personal about it. Now I am not a poor man and, as you may guess from my appearance or even perhaps from my voice, I am a man who enjoys a good dinner. So that you may bet your boots that I am going to take my share of any decent food that's going. I have had just one small piece of steak, about 3 inches square, in the last 12 months. I have not had a single lamb or mutton chop. I do not think I have had even 1 square inch of fried ham. In normal times I eat plenty of fruit, but now, of course, there just isn't any fruit. Oranges go to our children. Cream vanished long ago. I have a sweet tooth, but I do not suppose that I have a bit of dessert that seems to be anything like sweet enough, more than once every two or three weeks.

We aren't hungry and we are pretty healthy, but except on a few special occasions, dining is no longer much of a pleasure. All the best food, especially the best meat, goes to our men in the services, and, of course, nobody grumbles about that.

NOW for transport: This is getting tough, and if you feel like grumbling about your new restrictions, just remember ours. From July 1 on there is no such thing as private motoring in this country. Any use of gasoline for purposes of pleasure will get you into trouble at once. Taxicabs and bus services have been cut down and are being cut down still further.

Nobody knows much more about this than I do, or about the situation in the country. When I broadcast to overseas audiences I have to do it late at night. I'll tell you how I get to and from the studio—I walk. I am supposed to be doing a fairly important piece of national service, but I am not allowed the use of a car, nor any gasoline. At 3 in the morning I walk.

Our train services are being cut down, too, with the result that most long-distance trains are very crowded indeed. Traveling to the Midlands the other day to make a speech, I had to stand five hours in a packed corridor. Furthermore, I never take much baggage, no more than I can carry myself, because porters are exceedingly scarce.

NEXT, hours of work: It stands to reason that we could not have mobilized so many men and women and raised our war production to such a stupendous height without enormously increasing our hours of work. Most people are working at least one-and-a-half times the amount that they worked before the war. In addition, nearly everybody is doing some other job of national service. Most people are hard at it from morning till night at least six days a week.

I don't myself consider this any great hardship. The best way to get through a period of total war successfully is, to my mind, to be as busy as possible doing what you feel are useful jobs. If you're in it you might as well be in it up to the neck.

WHAT we are paying for this war: Nearly all the workers in factories pay income tax for the first time in their lives and, in addition, our indirect taxation, such as duties on sugar, tobacco, liquor and the heavy purchase taxes on goods of all kinds, is very high indeed. The combined income and surtax on larger incomes has reached a truly fantastic proportion. I lived very comfortably before the war. Now it would be quite impossible for me to earn enough money to leave me enough, after paying taxes, to live at that rate.

No matter how successful anyone may have been before the war, he realizes that he will have to start all over again after the war. There is nothing to grumble at in that. Believing that the bad old world can be replaced by a new and much better world, I am delighted, even if it means that every single thing I ever possessed vanished with that old world.

I am beginning to understand, at last, that wealth consists of resources and labor and not of financial figures in books. This may mean that, at the end of this war, we shall realize that the world has developed its resources and organized and improved its labor. Then the world is potentially wealthier than ever—and that men have only to cooperate sensibly, and to stop snarling, plotting and grabbing, to enjoy that real wealth.

Meanwhile, please accept my assurance that the people of this island are geared, as never before in their history, to fight this war to a finish. I believe our fighting men have never been tougher. I believe our workers have never before made such colossal efforts. I believe our whole civilian population is willingly and thankfully making the innumerable sacrifices demanded of it.

Though we may differ on this problem and that—for we are no driven herd but a company of democratic men and women with minds of our own—I believe that never before as a nation have we been so single-minded and so devoted to one common task: the complete extinction of nazism, fascism, Japanese militarism and all such enemies of the free mind and of the free heart.

Little Congress Opposes Defeat Of Isolationists

Members of the Little Congress, organization of Capitol Hill employes, recessed for the rest of the summer last night with the resolution that they definitely did not approve of the contention "that all pre-war 100 per cent isolationists in Congress should be defeated in the coming elections."

The decision followed a debate in the caucus room of the Old House Office Building, between four members of the group, on: "Resolved, That Such Isolationists Should Be Weeded Out in the Coming Elections." James C. Brown, secretary to Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat) of Oklahoma, and Vince Guarnera, secretary to Representative Charles Kramer (Democrat) of California, represented the affirmative. Alice M. Tuohy, secretary to Representative James O'Leary (Democrat) of New York, and William McMahan, secretary to Representative Martin L. Sweeney (Democrat) of Ohio, debated the negative.

Adolf Gets the Names

"Who heads der Yanks?" der Fuehrer asked.
"What is this foeman's name?
"Some Jones or Smith or Brown, I guess——
"Decadent names, for shame!"
"Come! Come! Speak up!" he thundered out——
And then turned sick and sour . . .
Up spoke Herr Goebbels and explained
"Der name is Eisenhower!"

"Der is an air force chief dot's new,"
Der Fuehrer cried, "Who's he?
"Some silly non-Aryan name
"It certainly must be."
"Der name! Der name?" he roared anew
"Of all dose U. S. rats!" . . .
And then he did a tailspin as
He got the answer, "Spaatz"

"Who heads dot far Pacific fleet?"
Adolf yelled through his nose
"Some Dewey, Evans, Farragut
Or Paul Jones," I suppose;
And then he did a somersault
Into the kitchen sink,
As Goebbels said in bitter tones
"It's Nimitz, so I think!"

"I read aboudt a chief of staff,"
Adolf roared angrily;
"It must be Adams, Donovan,
Revere, O'Brien or Lee;"
And then he hit the stratosphere—
And even went much higher—
As Goebbels said, "This breaks my heart—
The name, gott, is Stratemeyer!"

"Enough! Enough!" der Fuehrer cried
As he tore out some hair;
And did a standing jacknife dive
Right off a kitchen chair;
"This is a vicious U. S. plot
Conceived in wickedness
"To mix us up and quite confuse
All Germany, I guess."

"Stratemeyer! . . . Spaatz . . . Und Eisenhower! . . .
It surely can't be right."
He cried, "What names are these to head
A foe that we must fight?
Der bulletins each side sends out
Will add to all my cares;
I won't know which is my report——
And which report is theirs!"

Full chaos struck the German staff——
And Hitler dizzy grew;
As couriers came rushing in
With tidings very blue:
"An A. E. F. is here," one cried,
"And by the first reports
Der first two men ashore were
Hans Spiegel and Max Schwartz!

Now a lumber shortage is threatened. We hear that up in Vermont it may be necessary to ration toothpicks.

GAS PAINS

Four gallons a week,
Four gallons, no more,
Keep a man growling
Grunting and sore.

The modern query put to a car driver seems to be "How many miles do you get to a unit?"

Gas went up 2½ cents a gallon. It will soon be up as high as the price the bootleggers have been getting.

Canada's Budget

By Janet R. Keith

Luxuries Are Out

CANADIAN incomes were hit with a triple-edged weapon when the new budget was brought down. Every wage-earner who makes more than $660 a year has three stiff incomes taxes to pay.

First, there is a flat-rate tax on total income. This used to be called the national defense tax, and ran from 3 to 5 per cent for married persons and from 5 to 7 per cent for single persons. Now it's called the "normal" tax (the finance department will have its little joke) and amounts to 7 per cent for married people and 7 to 9 per cent for single.

THEN there is a "graduated" tax, faintly reminiscent of the pre-war style income tax. But now there is a basic exemption of $660 for everyone. A married man is allowed a flat deduction from his tax of $150, with an additional $80 deduction for each child or dependent. Rates of this graduated tax are steep. The first $500 (that's after allowing for the basic exemption of $660) will be taxed at the rate of 30 per cent, the next $500 at 33 per cent, the following $1000 at 37 per cent.

Finally, there is the new and startling feature known as "compulsory savings." This is not, as some feared it might be, really an additional tax. It simply means that part (from 1-5 to 1-12 of the total taxes paid will be regarded as savings, repayable after the war with interest at 2 per cent. For instance, a married man with an income of $3000 will pay a tax of $884, but $300 of this will be regarded as savings refundable after the war.

There are a few bright spots for the struggling wage-earner. Insurance premiums on life insurance contracts now in force will be deductible from compulsory savings. So will payments into superannuation funds, and principal payments on mortgages (for not more than one place of residence). If doctors' bills amount to more than 5 per cent of a man's total income, he can claim exemption from the graduated tax up to 5 per cent of his income. War service pensions, whether they arise out of the past war or the present one, are exempt from taxation.

While the new taxes do not formally place a ceiling on incomes, they will have the effect of keeping almost everyone well below the $25,000 level suggested by President Roosevelt. A Canadian with an income of $100,000 will be allowed to keep about $22,000 if he is married, less than $20,000 if he is single.

Members of Parliament are in the income group which is hit particularly hard. Ordinary members will find their yearly indemnity cut from $4000 to $3000. Cabinet members, who ordinarily get about $16,000, will have their salaries cut almost in half. The Prime Minister, who draws about $21,000 from the treasury, will pay taxes of more than $12,000.

The tax on excess profits is now 100 per cent, with provisions for refunding 20 per cent after the war. This scheme is identical with the one now in effect in Britain. It is expected that many corporations will have to reduce their current rate of dividends.

Taxes on profits which have not increased are also heavy, and when distributed in dividends are subject to personal as well as corporation income taxes. A company will now pay a flat rate of 12 per cent on its total profits as well as an 18 per cent corporation income tax. In addition it will pay either 10 per cent of its total profits or 100 per cent of its excess profits after deduction of income tax and the 12 per cent rate, whichever is greater.

The new 100 per cent rate becames effective July 1 and will be paid by monthly instalments, based on volume of business in the preceding period. All the new p sonal income taxes become effective September 1, and will be deductible at source.

Canadians will be getting much slimmer pay envelopes, and their money won't go nearly so far if they spend it on items in the "luxury" class. Taxes on spirits are sharply increased from $7 to $9 a gallon) as are the levies on wines and malt. The cigarette tax goes up from $6 to $8 a thousand, while the tax on Canadian raw leaf tobacco is doubled. A cent a bottle is added to the tax on soft drinks; the levy on transportation, berth and Pullman goes up from 10 to 15 per cent; taxes on long-distance telephone calls take another 5 per cent leap. There's a new tax of 20 per cent on charges to customers in night clubs, cabarets and dance halls.

On the manufacturers' level there's a tax of 30 per cent on candy and chewing gum, 25 per cent on all photographic supplies. At the retailers' level there are taxes of 25 per cent on almost every article obtainable in a jewelry store, smokers' supplies, fountain pens and desk sets, luggage and shopping bags, clocks and watches.

AT THE beginning of the war, Canada already had a sales tax of 8 per cent, on which wholesalers and retailers were allowed to calculate profits. With respect to the next taxes, merchants will be allowed to pass on to consumers no more than the exact amount of the tax actually paid.

All in all the new budget means that Canadians are now subject to a scale of taxation equalling that of Britain, and in some brackets higher. The Canadian scale is higher than that of the United States.

Summarizing Canada's financial position, Finance Minister Ilsley said that the country's estimated expenditures during the present fiscal year will be $3,900,000,000 (the war appropriation bill provides for spending two billion dollars of this, and the gift to Britain bill for one billion dollars). Estimated ordinary revenue will be $2,050,000,000 and refundable taxes 95 million dollars. This will leave $1,755,000,000 to be met by borrowing.

Mr. Ilsley emphasized that, in spite of the heavy new taxes, Canadians must subscribe more and more to victory loans and war savings certificates.

"Will this mean a reduction in your standard of living? Certainly . . . The war will be won, not alone by the valor of fighting forces and the skill of generals but by the willingness of the people at home to make necessary sacrifices—willingness to make those sacrifices first and not after all other groups have made them. I am asking that there should be practiced by every individual the most rigid economy.

"Do Canadians realize how critical the situation is at this moment in Russia, in China, and in the Middle East, and how critical it may be elsewhere before long? I believe that now they do, and that their individual desires for gain and ease and advantage are submerged in the nation's will to win. In this belief, I present this budget to the House and to the Canadian people."

Group Plans Meade Program

The Southern regional phase of the new camps project of the National Conference of Christians and Jews will begin in late July or early August with a program at Camp Meade, Md., it was learned yesterday.

Wendell Willkie has agreed to be among the speakers of the Camp Meade program, which will be of a patriotic and religious nature. The project will stress the principles of the National Conference—furtherance of justice, understanding and amity among Catholics, Jews and Protestants.

Last month the National Conference announced formation of a department of camps and military bases to promote its work among service men of all faiths. Other new departments formed were church cooperation, school cooperation and press, magazine and radio.

The Rev. A. W. Gottschall of this city is regional director of the National Conference and head of the new camp's department. He is now visiting Army camps and Naval stations throughout the country to arrange for the new project.

The program calls for teams of laymen or clergymen of three faiths, accompanied by entertainers, to visit the camps and naval stations for periods of from three to five days. With the cooperation of chaplains and officer personnel, they will conduct balanced programs of a spiritual, social and recreational nature.

Meanwhile, attaches of the Conference's Southern Regional offices in the Southern Building here yesterday reported enthusiastic comment on the Conference-sponsored film—"The World We Want to Live In," currently showing as an added feature at the Metropolitan Theater.

The film will wind up its current downtown run tomorrow at the Metropolitan, then show at the following neighborhood theaters in August: Uptown, 1, 2, 3; Tivoli, 2, 3, 4; Calvert and Penn, 5, 6, 7; Sherwood, 9, 10, 11; Avalon and Silver Spring, 12, 13, 14; Kennedy, 19, 20, 21; Colony, 23, 24, 25; Takoma, 23, 24; Colony, 23, 24, 25, and York, 30, 31.

Recruitment For WAAC Begins Monday

By the Associated Press

The War Department announced yesterday that recruiting of enlisted members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps would begin next Monday at all Army recruiting stations.

Initial enlistments, said Mrs. William P. Hobby, director of the WAAC, would be chiefly among women with special occupational experience. The first basic training course for enlisted members will begin August 17 at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, with 128 women in training. By the middle of October, the WAAC expects to have 800 women entering the training course each week at Fort Des Moines.

At present, the WAAC wants particularly to enlist clerks, cooks, bakers, bookkeepers, stenographers, switchboard operators and supervisors, chauffeurs, cafeteria dieticians and cashiers, hostess aides, receptionists, library aides, machine record operators and motion picture projectionists.

Rules Unit Blocks Bill to Put Unions Under Racket Law

By the Associated Press

House action on legislation designed to bring labor unions under jurisdiction of the Federal anti-racketeering statute was reported stymied yesterday by refusal of the powerful Rules Committee to send the measure to the floor.

"The majority of the committee feels that this is no time to stir up trouble, and that is my personal opinion, too," declared Chairman Sabath (Democrat) of Illinois.

But Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, the bill's author and a member of the Judiciary Committee which approved it by a split vote, asserted that "we have by no means given up hope" of obtaining a vote on the issue.

D. C. Baptists Named to Key Religious Posts

Several Washington Baptist leaders have been named to important posts on Northern Baptist Convention boards.

That announcement came yesterday from the Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Robbins, president of the Convention, with headquarters at 152 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the D. C. Baptist Convention, was appointed to the committee on Baptist Historical Libraries.

Named to the public relations committee are the Rev. Dr. William S. Abernethy, who recently retired as pastor of Calvary Baptist Church; the Rev. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, new Calvary pastor; the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church; W. W. Everett, well-known Baptist layman and vice president of Woodward & Lothrop, and the Rev. Dr. Gove G. Johnson, pastor of National Baptist Memorial Church. Mrs. William Abernethy is a member of the program committee for the 1943 convention. Miss Bess Goodykoontz was named to the committee on children and the church.

Dr. Robbins reported that the Northern Baptist convention will try to raise another $600,000 for world emergency purposes. The regular budget is $2,614,300, including an additional $250,000 for the church extension reserve fund.

WPB Praises Boy Trying to Solve Rubber Problem

Little Rock, Ark., July 15 (AP).—nine-year-old Kennard Clark didn't solve the Nation's rubber shortage as he had hoped—but he had a letter of gratitude from Washington today for his patriotic effort.

Kennard, a fifth grade student with an enthusiasm for chemistry, was experimenting last month. He sliced a hunk out of his plastic belt, melted it with a mixture of sulphur and discovered the result was a rubber-like substance.

R. F. Wolf, assistant chief of the War Production Board's synthetic rubber section, eventually got Kennard's letter and in a sympathetic reply explained that what Kennard had "discovered" was a substance already in use as a rubber substitute for wire insulation, raincoats and other essential uses.

Then Wolf added that he was "certain the President Roosevelt would be as grateful as I am for the interest you have shown in the problem."

Reckord Talked Through Hat On Baltimore Vice, Chief Says

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 15.—Police Commissioner Robert F. Stanton declared today that Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Third Corps Area commanding officer, was "talking through his hat" if he thought vice and venereal disease conditions were bad in Baltimore.

"I have no wish to enter into an argument with General Reckord," Stanton said, "but he is definitely misinformed if he thinks Baltimore is below average in the control of venereal disease and vice."

In an address yesterday before some 2600 city liquor dealers and tavern keepers, Reckord said he had evidence that "liquor and prostitution flourish side by side" in many places here.

Threatens Action

"I have more power than any police commissioner ever had," Reckord told them. "If the police of Baltimore City do not come to our aid and correct these abuses, then I shall see that it is done."

Agreeing with Stanton was Charles T. LeViness, chairman of the Board of Liquor License Commissioners, who said, "Conditions here are quite good."

He added that the number of taverns of the sort castigated by Reckord could be "easily counted on your fingers."

Leviness said "the truth is that the Army's so-called facts are distinctly hearsay in character.

"We never have been able to get anything specific from the Army. All they offer us are reports about some place with a funny sign in front of it where a soldier said he met a girl named May.

"You can't act on such material. It wouldn't pass in any court of law."

Suggested Speech

Leviness said Reckord had addressed the tavern keepers at his suggestion, and that he was in sympathy with the General's purpose and goal and felt that some taverns might be declared out of bounds to soldiers, not because there was legal evidence against them, but because of strong suspicion.

In the meantime, the Federal Bureau of Investigation held a conference on venereal disease control at Cumberland for police authorities at Allegany and Garrett Counties.

In Salisbury, law enforcement agencies planned a coordinated drive against vice affecting the armed forces while an FBI conference for police of Frederick and Washington Counties was scheduled for Hagerstown on July 22.

Jury Sworn in to Probe Shipyard Contracts

Philadelphia, July 15 (AP).—A Federal grand jury was sworn in today to investigate allegations of collusive bidding on contracts for the rehabilitation of Cramp's shipyards.

The inquiry was ordered after witnesses testified before a Senate Naval Appropriations Committee last month that there were irregularities in the awarding of contracts to rebuild the yards for war work.

When and Where to Wear Shorts, Slacks, Are Questions of the Hour

Play Clothes That Are Kind to Figure Also a Problem

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

IN WARTIME Washington, even the busiest "duration" worker is finding time to play. No one objects to seeing the office girl out having a good time. But what she wears—and what she should wear—are becoming increasing topics of conversation. Pertinent questions of the day are:

Where should shorts be worn and where are they taboo?

What about slacks?

Above all, which types of play clothes are best for girls who are not "Miss Americas?"

Strange as it may seem a woman will spend weeks looking for a becoming dress. When it comes to play clothes, she buys them in 5 minutes. Result—the femme with an extra roll at her midriff is usually seen in a 2-piece brief; while the shapeless girl invariably takes to a skin-tight maillot.

Kind to Figure

Dressmaker swim suits have had great success since they were introduced a few years ago. And why? Because they are so kind to the figure. The slender girl should especially take note here. The full suit fills out where one needs it and whittles away (because of its elastic fittings) where there is extra poundage.

A sarong, too, has its place, but that place is on a bathing beauty figure. This also goes for 2-piece varieties of any type, whether maillots, rubber shorts or cotton briefs. The palm goes to an exceptionally large woman seen in one of the public indoor pools recently. Her size would have been objectionable in a tight suit. Although hers was a 1-piece wool, it fit high up under the arms, well up over the bust and hung loose around the plump part of her legs. It was not of an antique vintage, either.

Shorts Are Out

At their best, however, shorts are not approved attire for the streets. Even the accompanying tennis racket doesn't excuse the lack of an overskirt. For such occasions, it is easy to slip on a tie-on dirndl. One that slides over the head will readily serve the purpose. This also applies to attire worn over swimming suits—although authorities say they have had little trouble since there are no public beaches nearby.

Concessions will naturally have to be made for canoers, hikers, tennis players and the like, who have to travel by bus instead of auto. But it is a simple matter, especially in the heat of the summer, to find "coverage" clothes. When you arrive at your destination, fold them into a little bag. Convention is still the rule. Pinafores, play dresses, beach robes, smocks, dirndls and jumpers are being sold by the dozens in local stores. Wear them for the sake of propriety when you are walking on public streets or traveling in public conveyances.

A type of play suit that is easy on the figure and also in good taste (provided, of course, you don't wear it on the street or to a wedding) is modeled above by Actress Mary Astor. The diminutive dark polka dot print of the shorts is slenderizing. Light trim at the bodice always whittles away the hips by inches. Long full sleeves are also becoming to the mature figure with large arms

Vitamins Lost in Overcooking; Raw Foods Are Best Source of C

By Ida Jean Kain

There are some very good cooks who let more than half the vitamins in food get away from them in the process of cooking it. For examples, frying meat destroys from 30 to 60 per cent of the vitamin B2, and in cooking vegetables from 30 to 40 per cent of the vitamin C may be lost in the water in which they are cooked.

Another vitamin that dissolves in the cooking water is vitamin B1. Next to vitamin C this vitamin is the most easily destroyed in cooking. As much as 50 per cent of the vitamin B1 content of foods has been found in the water in which they were cooked. Of course, if the water were not thrown away, the vitamin would not really be lost.

Vegetable Cocktails

Since so much of the vitamin and mineral value of food depends on whether or not the cooking water is used, you can't afford to toss this water down the drain. To be sure, vegetables should always be cooked in as little water as possible. But any that is left over should be served in vegetable juice cocktails. Try mixing it with one-third tomato juice and serve it cold.

Vitamin C is the one you get in oranges, tomatoes and grapefruit and their juices. It's air that destroys vitamin C. If fruit juice is kept in an air-tight container it can be stored for as long as 24 hours without affecting the vitamin C content.

General Rules

Heating affects vitamin C so drastically that with the exception of tomatoes, cooked foods are not good sources. Even tomatoes should not be allowed to simmer on the stove. But ripe tomatoes can be stored for as long as 10 days with little loss in vitamin value and the loss is always less when the food is kept under refrigeration. Because most of the vitamin C is in the fruit next to the skin, small apples are proportionately higher in this vitamin than the larger ones.

Here are general rules to help you keep the vitamins intact while cooking:

Whenever possible, cook vegetables whole and with their outward coverings on; never peel and chop up vegetables, then let stand before cooking; serve food as soon as cooked—never let stand; to keep greens green, cook quickly in open kettle—do not add soda, as it hastens the destruction of the vitamins; avoid use of copper kettles or utensils that have copper in them, as this metal has a destructive effect on vitamin C; start vegetables in boiling water and in as small amounts of water as possible; cook rapidly; do not fry foods that can be cooked any other way.

Since Fiance's Death Some Months Ago, Girl Visits Burden of Grief Upon Solicitous Mother; Ashamed of Herself, She Asks How to Be Strong

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The problem with which I am confronted today, and with which I seem unable to cope, is as follows: Upon the death of my fiance several months ago, I became very nervous; felt the utter futility of human endeavor; and have since frequently given way to emotional outbursts. I mean spells of weeping, induced by self pity.

I feel utterly ashamed of myself for thus proclaiming my weak inadequacy to meet the challenge of fate. But the real rub, the thing of which I am most ashamed, is that I surrender most frequently to these outbursts when with my mother, who is the one and only real friend I have in this life. My mother becomes greatly distressed; because she is overcome with pity for my grief. While I don't do so intentionally, nevertheless I do inflict a form of sorrow upon her, in giving way to my feelings. She does grieve for my condition.

Please tell me, Miss Haworth, why do I give way to my emotions in the presence of my darling mother, whom I love with all my heart—and never in the presence of superficial friends, who care nothing for me; and for whom I have only a perfunctory affection. You have no idea how much worry this causes me. Not so much my lack of self control, which is lamentable, of course, but which I shall probably overcome in time; but the devastating effect it has upon my mother, who is well advanced in years, and for whom I feel an ineffable devotion and respect. If I were to lose her in the near future, I know I should never forgive myself for having caused her unhappiness during her last days. Please help me, Miss Haworth; and answer as soon as you conveniently can.

Shared Commiseration Has Depressing Effect

DEAR L. S. E.: You and your mother are caught up in a vicious circle of maudlin, reciprocal commiserating. Each of you is progressively undermining the other's morale—her emotional and nervous health, her zest for life and social efficiency—in swapping back and forth so much coddling concern. The reason you "break down" in your mother's presence is because of the depressing quality of thought she projects toward you.

Instead of realizing and properly maintaining her own independence of personality, and cultivating healthy detachment of mind toward other individuals, including yourself, she has (perhaps all your life) wrongfully "identified" herself with your experiences, in the sense of seeking to savor, vicariously, all that you feel. In consequence, she is now seriously "infected" by your latterday grief—with the result that she continuously "reinfects" you with morbid melancholy, even as you do her.

If each of you would demonstrate a positive desire to promote the other's happiness and well-being, you must do some emotional house-cleaning—and do it in a hurry. Your mother's heartaching attitude toward you, as well as yours toward yourself AND her, must be thrown into the discard. Fortunately, this sickening shared commiseration goes no deeper than a point of view; so that in changing the quality of your thought toward each other, you can immediately be rid of the restrictive emotion and its ill effects.

Your woeful anxiety concerning each other conveys a sorry compliment. Your respective attitudes imply that each deems the other a weakling. You assume that your handwringing performance may be the death of your mother yet—thus overlooking the fact that her already advanced age demonstrates her exceptional hardihood, a quality that should thrill you with gratified pride. She, on the other hand, foolishly thinks of you as a "poor child"—instead of bearing in mind that you are a woman grown, now well advanced on the path of adult experience, having known love and sorrow in equal measure; so that life can never again take you really unawares.

The person who is "a tower of strength," a stabilizing power to others in times of tragedy, emergency, catastrophe, etc., invariably brings a kindly matter-of-factness to bear in coping with trying circumstance and stricken outcry. Such should be your mother's attitude toward you in your bereavement—if she would help you establish the habit of quiet self-control. As between her nervous display of uneasy solicitude (which you must guard against) and your "superficial" friends' don't-care reaction, the latter attitude is much to be preferred—as witness the fact that you never "give way" in their presence. By way of "help," I recommend to your attention Winfred Rhoades' book, "The Self You Have to Live With," which proposes the solution of this joint problem of emotional depression.

Changes Clip Color For Each Gown

Hollywood, Calif.—Ida Lupino gave the women set-workers one of the most original and clever ideas to date the other day, while resting between shots of her next film.

Ida chanced to say that she had a lapel clip which would go with any costume color. To doubters she explained:

"There is a fabric paint called Decora. It comes in many colors, is transparent in effect, and can be applied as easily as nail polish. There is also a remover for it, just as there is a nail polish remover. I have a large clip of brilliants, which, if I need a ruby clip, say, I can transform into a clip of sparkling red stones by covering it with red Decora. In other words, the clip can serve as an ornament for any colored costume. All I have to do is remove the old color and paint on a new."

Beauty Routine Required for Bare-Leg Mode

A heavy or dark growth of hair on the legs spoils their looks, no matter how shapely. It doesn't look pretty even under stockings. Most women consider it a part of good grooming to remove unsightly hairs regularly, especially during the summer when legs are exposed.

Women who use a razor for this purpose might take a lesson from the men in the conservation of the precious steel blades. It is in keeping with the times that razor blades be well cared for. Always wash the legs with a cloth wrung out in soapy warm water before using the razor, as this softens the hair and makes it less resistant to the blade. Then, be sure to wash and dry the blade thoroughly after each use. To keep it from rusting, wrap it back in its little paper cover. People who live near the seashore should be particularly careful about this, because salt air tends to corrode the steel and this, of course, makes it unusable.

A good soap and water scrub will remove the dry skin particles that sometimes give a rough or dandruffy surface, and extra scrubbing of the heels will help prevent the formation of calluses where the shoe comes in contact with the skin. For extra glamour, spread on some flesh-colored hand lotion or suntan lotion, depending upon wwhether stockings or socks are to be worn.

Give Up Hangers

Your drycleaner wishes you would return all wire hangers. Twenty-seven thousand tons of steel go into hangers annually, and, of course, steel now has victory work to do.

Know Source of Spot Before Cleaning

If you value your clothes, tell your dry cleaner what caused the spot. The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, who ought to know, says that is one of the most effective ways you can help conserve fabrics and insure a faster, better dry cleaning job. Just identify the stain as Sunday night's Martini, Junior's strained spinach or whatever. A quality dry cleaner will then know exactly what spotting agent to use, without wasted time and testing.

John Stonborough to Wed Miss Morrison-Bell Tomorrow in Canada; News of a Novelist Who Has a New Granddaughter—Her Namesake; Jan Struthers ("Mrs. Miniver") Here for Visit

FROM BROCKVILLE, ONTARIO, comes word that Miss Veronica Frances Morrison-Bell and Officer-Cadet John Jerome Stonborough, Canadian Army, Active Force, will be married there tomorrow. This will be of wide interest here, for the bride-elect has been working in the Washington office of the combined Chiefs of Staffs, United Nations, for some time, and her fiance lived here for some time before he joined the Canadian army.

Miss Morrison-Bell is the youngest daughter of Sir Claude and Lady Morrison-Bell of High Green, Northumberland, England. Mr. Stonborough is the son of Mrs. Jerome Stonborough of 417 Park Avenue, New York, and the late Mr. Stonborough. He recently returned to North America after a year overseas with the Seventeenth Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars and is now stationed at the officers' training center in Brockville. He is a member of the University Club and was a popular member of the younger set during the two years he lived here.

Frances Parkinson Keyes 2d Born

From New Orleans there's news that Frances Parkinson Keyes, who has been sojourning there for several months, is a grandmother again. Her eldest son, Henry W. Keyes, and Mrs. Keyes are the proud parents of a second daughter, born in Boston on July 11. And here's why Mrs. Keyes is doubly thrilled over the arrival—the child has been named Frances Parkinson Keyes 2d! The mother is the former Betty Main of Denver and the child's sister is Margaretta Main Keyes.

Mrs. Keyes, the novelist, took off to the South last autumn for the purpose of—you guessed it—writing another book. She had hoped to have it finished and off to her publisher before this, but now, by her own admission, she has ceased predicting when it will be finished.

Writes Mrs. Keyes: "My first hope was to have it done by May 15, and my first expectation July 15. However, since the first announcements are already out in Publishers Weekly and a first printing scheduled for the end of October, the writing itself must be done pretty soon; but I hope there will be something left of me by the time it is!"

The book is to be called "Crescent Carnival," and I do hope it gathers in a lot of the traditional mardi gras atmosphere, accented with plenty of romance and just a dash of mystery. Mrs. Keyes has made me no promises along those lines. In fact, she hasn't dropped a single hint as to the content. But she did say that it "is another of those great long stories requiring endless effort and research."

She adds, "Washington is as cool as a Maine resort compared with New Orleans in summer, but I have enjoyed most phases of my work here very much, and the people have been very kind to me."

Jan Struthers Is Dynamic—and Different

Speaking of one writer reminds me of another—Jan Struthers, creator of the inimitable "Mrs. Miniver," who plans to be in Washington for a few days and will certainly add a dash of special interest to the local scene every minute she stays here.

I'm looking forward to seeing Miss Struthers at a late afternoon party today. Having met her once before when she stopped by the Capital for a brief visit, I'm prepared to tell you she is one of the most attractive women—well, women writers, anyway—I've ever met. Apparently she's interested in practically everything, and she is not reticent about expressing her views on any subject you can mention. Last, and first, time I saw her she had delivered 24 lectures in seven weeks and had traveled 11,500 miles through the Mississippi Valley and into Texas by motor and back again to the East Coast.

Has Covered America, From Coast to Coast

That was some time ago, and she has covered many more miles since and lectured at hundreds of towns all over America. I've an idea she's talked about "Mrs. Miniver" until she's worn out with her, and it. But at that time, you had only to mention that you had read the book to see her face light up with the enthusiasm noticeable when any mother's favorite child is brought into the conversation.

Today, of course, everybody at the party will be talking about "Mrs. Miniver" all over again, since so many of us have seen the motion picture. I remember one thing she said when plans for Hollywood production of her book came up for discussion.

"I can't tell you much about that," she said. "I just sold 'em the title and the characters . . . and then decided I'd better keep out of it from then on."

Which shows you, of course, that Miss Struthers is by way of being different from most women writers—in more ways than one.

TRAVEL NOTES: After spending a year and a half in Trinidad, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Donnelly are back in this country once more and will return to Washington July 21. Mrs. Donnelly is the former Miss Cynthia Hathaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hathaway of Bethesda. She and her husband, who were married here in June, 1940, took off to Trinidad the following February and returned only a couple of days ago to Golden Beach, Fla., where her parents met them. The four will join Miss Ann Hathaway here, where she has been entertaining a number of houseguests since finishing her year at the Finch School, New York, a few weeks ago.

The marriage of Elizabeth Haselden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Gaunt of Montreal, to Dr. Dwight Parkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Parkinson of Washington, took place yesterday afternoon at half-past 5 o'clock in the chapel of Divinity Hall, McGill University, Montreal. Colonel the Rev. J. Bruce Hunter, LL. D., D. D., M. C., E. D., senior Protestant chaplain for M. D. 4, officiated. The chapel, lighted with white candles in tall candelabra, was decorated with white gladioli and tall ferns in white urns.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white English silk jersey having a panel extending in the front from the neckline to the hem and soft shirrings in the long fitted bodice, with picture frame neckline, which was fastened in the back with tiny self-covered buttons; the skirt, shirred from the sides of the panel, extended into a train. Her veil of tulle illusion, reaching beyond the hem of her train, was caught to her head with the orange blossoms worn by her grandmother at er wedding, and she carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and bouvardia.

Mrs. Malcolm B. Mackenzie of Montreal, was matron of honor, and her sister's only attendant.

Dr. Jack Godfrey of Jamaica Plains, Mass., was best man for Dr. Parkinson, and the ushers were Dr. Malcolm B. Mackenzie of Montreal, brother-in-law of the bride; Dr. Richard Watson of Portsmouth, N. H., Dr. Austin Grant of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Dr. Renwick Caldwell, of Burlington, Vt.

H., and of the Faculty of Medicine, McGill University, Montreal.

Latin American Feminists Looks to U. S. For Leadership in Women's Rights

FEMINIST LEADERS in the Latin American countries now have their eyes focused on the "Equal Rights Amendment" up before the United States Congress. If Congress shelves the amendment, the South American feminist leaders fear their struggle for political and civil rights will take a back seat.

As a matter of fact, it was only after the feminist movement in this country had gained a strong foothold that the women of the 21 Sister Republics started their fight for more rights. That is why the National Woman's Party's tea, Sunday afternoon, holds special significance for women throughout the Western Hemisphere. This celebration commemorates the ninety-fourth anniversary of the First Woman's Rights Convention held at Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1848.

Although working toward the same end—equal rights the Latin American women are using a different technique from the early North American suffragettes. Whereas the United States women fought long and whenever necessary loudly for suffrage, the Latin feminist uses more subtle weapons.

Have Their Own Ideology

Discussing feminism in Latin America, Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter American Commission of Women, pointed out that the movement does not use violence or become strident in its demands. "Our countries have their own ideology with respect to this doctrine," she said, "and the feminist campaign must be conducted with a special, almost diplomatic, technique."

Except in Cuba no woman has been jailed for clamoring for the vote, more political and civil rights. Maria Blanca Sabas Aloma, now one of Cuba's leading feminist, once went to jail for the cause. Finally in 1934, the women of Cuba gained equal suffrage with men.

Mexico has a peculiar setup in regard to woman suffrage. In 1938, the women obtained the right to vote. Yet, by a mere technicality, they still are unable to exercise that right. While the Constitution gives the Mexican women national suffrage, the President of the country must give the promulgation. That has yet to come.

Three outstanding feminist leaders in Mexico are: Margarita Robles de Mendoza, Esperanza Balmace de Josse and Amalia Castillo de Ledon. By the way, Senora de Ledon is well known in Washington. She has represented the Mexican government numerous times at the Inter American Commission of Women's sessions here.

Many Share Suffrage

Men and women enjoy national suffrage on the same terms in the following political units of the Americas:

United States and Territories since 1920: Puerto Rico, 1935; Virgin Islands, 1936; Ecuador, 1929; Brazil, 1932; Cuba, 1934; El Salvador, 1939.

The American Republics that have granted partial suffrage to women are as follows:

Chile since 1931 (limited municipal suffrage and equal municipal suffrage in 1934: Peru, equal municipal suffrage since 1933; Argentina, Province of Santa Fe gained municipal suffrage in 1921, while the Province of San Juan obtained equal municipal and provincial suffrage in 1937.

The Dominican Republic obtained equal suffrage and great elasticity of civil and political rights in January 1941.

Women's Club Set to Launch Vice Crusade

By Ruth Cowan
Associated Press Staff Writer

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is mobilizing its 2,500,000 members into a drive to force a cleanup of vice conditions which it finds are rife around many Army and Navy areas.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, president, said yesterday that this drive, intended to reach every hamlet as well as the big cities, where soldiers and sailors are concentrated, is in response to a rising demand by women all over the country.

"Every place I go—and I've been in 28 States from coast to coast in recent months—women are concerned over the increase in prostitution, venereal disease and drinking," she said in an interview. "I haven't addressed a meeting of clubwomen—and I'm constantly speaking to clubs, big and little—that women don't get up in the audience and want to know what can be done."

She reported receiving hundreds of letters asking the same thing, many of them from mothers. All this prompted her to look into what could be done.

Women are concerned not only with stamping out vice around military areas but in cleaning up the home communities so that they will be better places when the boys return, Mrs. Whitehurst continued.

As a result a comprehensive program—one that would have been considered quite daring for a women's club a few years ago—has been drafted by the federation's department of public welfare of which Mrs. Horace B. Ritchie, of Athens, Ga., is chairman.

Copies of this program, now being printed, will be sent to all the federation's 16,500 clubs with the recommendation that it be made a main project in the new club year opening in September.

The program has four main objectives—community venereal disease clinics, repression of prostitution by law enforcement, by elimination of the exploiters of prostitution and by rehabilitation of prostitutes; education of the public to the need of venereal disease control, and the provision of wholesale community recreation facilities for young people.

This altitude is gradually increased to 5000 feet for more advanced practice as the student becomes more adept at "dead stick" landings

'Dead Stick' Landing Final Test Of Student Glider Pilot's Skill

The newest winged warriors of the Army Air Forces are the "G" men of the air—glider pilots—who are trained to guide huge troop-carrying gliders in the fore of aerial offensives against the enemy.

Gliding, until recently the sport of a few, has now become the serious war business of thousands of young men. Typical of the 18 preglider schools now in full operation in the Middle West is the one located on the flatlands of Goodland, Kans.

PHILIP UBALDINI
A Glider Pilot

During the four weeks of preliminary training the student practices simulated gliding in small power ships, with the power switched off. He masters the technique of "dead stick" landing and in bringing his powerless plane down within a small marked area. Judgment in landing is the final test of a glider pilot.

In actual combat he will be called upon to cut loose from the towing plane thousands of feet up and miles away from his objective behind the enemy lines. From then on he is on his own. If he misjudged the distance or approach to a small pasture, or his angle of glide, he has no engine to pull him out for another try.

Philip J. Ubaldini (inset), selected as typical of student glider pilots, is 24 years old, hails from Woonsocket, R. I., and took his CPT pilot training at Hillsgrove Airport, R. I.

When he has demonstrated his skill at powerless flight at the preliminary school, the student goes on to an advanced school. A week in a small two-place training glider prepares him to take over the controls of a large troop-carrying glider. Next comes a period of training at a tactical training center, where he meets and trains with his "cargo"—air-borne troops. Together they form a team—the "Commandos of the Air."

Glider pilot training in the Army Air Forces is open to men between the ages of 18 and 36, inclusive, who are graduates of civil pilot training schools, or hold a Civil Aeronautics Administration private air-man certificate which had not lapsed prior to January 1, 1941.

Government Girl Gets Film Bid

A comely Government worker, from deep in the heart of you-know-where, will put 3000 miles between her typewriter and herself tonight in the hope of embarking upon a movie career.

Mary Byrne, blondish and willowy, is going to Hollywood to be screen-tested for Bob Hope's newest picture, "They've Got Me Covered." She has been in the movies before, but only as a ticket holder, and while she is very fond of her job as a secretary in OPA, Miss Byrne frankly admits she would love to be an actress.

"They told me I'd be out there a month," she said yesterday, "but I hope it will be longer than that. Just the same, I'm playing safe. I lent my bicycle to one girl and my ironing board to another and told them to remember, it was only for a month."

It seems the Goldwyn studio wanted an authentic Washington secretary to play that role in the Hope picture. A talent scout interviewed about 16 of them here last Saturday. Miss Byrne, who came here last year from Dallas, Tex., was the choice.

"I love my job but oh you movies," she said.

Washington 'Shipyard'—This miniature boat-building center on the Anacostia River is where Army Engineers build and launch the big pontoons to support emergency floating bridges erected on the Potomac and on the waters of the Eastern Shore of Maryland. More than 200 men, working in conjunction with the Army engineers, are employed in the "shipyard." Their production totals eight 65-foot pontoons each week, or four every three days. Pontoons in various stages of construction may be seen on four ways in the yard. At right—A pontoon hits the water as it comes off the ways. Prince Georges, Montgomery Fade in State-Wide Blackout

Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, along with the rest of Maryland, were blacked out last night and early today as the Old Line State held its first State-wide blackout test.

Homes and business places extinguished their lights from 9 p. m. last night to 5 a. m. today when the test ended, but traffic and street lights remained on except during the 30-minute air raid drill when there was a complete blackout.

In Prince Georges, both Robert Sherwood, chairman of the county civilian defense council, and Thomas F Rosewag, deputy chief air raid warden, who served as chief warden in the absence of E. F. Zalesak, described themselves as "very pleased with the test."

Sherwood said four violations affecting commercial establishments were reported and added that prosecution would be in order for the violators. All left lights burning at their places of business.

Members of the State Guard in full equipment stood guard over public utilities, airports and other conceivable military objectives.

For the 30-minute air raid drill, which began at 9:36 p. m., members of the State police received their warning calls from the Pikesville radio station and found that this system, as opposed to the use of telephones, was from two to three times speedier.

A number of "incidents," involving make-believe situations created by bombings, were reported during the drill. The emergency services promptly responded to each call.

Industrial Plants Shut

During the drill, many industrial plants producing war materiel were forced to shut down inasmuch as they were not equipped with curtains which would screen lights so as not to be visible from the outside.

Although the District did not take part in the blackout, many people here were affected by the all-night test. Washington motorists were halted on highways leading into nearby Maryland for the duration of the air raid drill, and other thousands of local residents who patronize the amusement resort at Glen Echo and the Potomac River excursion boats were forced to look elsewhere for their pleasure. Glen Echo was shut down and the boats were kept at their docks on orders from the captain of the port.

On the Bladensburg Road leading into Prince Georges, cars and trucks were backed up for several miles before being allowed to proceed on receipt of the "all clear" signal.

2 Marine Lieutenants Have Blackout Troubles

Two Marine lieutenants, traveling by car from Baltimore to Washington and under orders, they said, to be here by 10 p. m., posed a knotty problem for Prince Georges County officials last night.

They were stopped at Laurel by an air-raid warden at the beginning of the air raid drill and told they could not proceed. The officers then appealed by telephone to Robert Sherwood, county civilian defense head, who upheld the warden and told them they would have to wait until the drill was over.

They waited, but a short time after the drill ended, County Policeman Boyd Hamilton stopped them and charged the pair had driven through Muirkirk at an 87-mile-per-hour clip. A 15-mile limit was in effect for the blackout.

The speeding charge was dropped by police officials who preferred, in its place, a reckless driving charge and then released the pair on bond for trial next week.

Way to Recover Aluminum in Clay Reported

Lawrence, Kans., July 15 (Wide World).—University of Kansas scientists believe they have found a cheap new way of producing aluminum, Cinderella metal of the war.

If large-scale production develops as successfully as laboratory tests, Dr. R. C. Moore, director of the Kansas Geological Survey, predicts the door will be opened to many new processors who have been unable to compete with the established method of getting the precious metal from bauxite.

The new process uses clay from Kansas deposits containing quantities so large they never have been measured but which Dr. Moore estimates at 10 millions of tons.

The method hich Dr. Moore describes is relatively low in cost and simple in operation. Details cannot be disclosed in a Nation at war, but the materials they mixed with the abundant Kansas clay also are plentiful and cheap. The mixture is heated until a cinder is formed containing A soluble aluminate and this soluble chemical is removed merely by application of hot water.

Laboratory tests have shown 70 per cent of the alumina in the clay can be recovered in this way.

Alumina is a combination of aluminum and oxygen. Once it is obtained, the method of getting aluminum in its metallic form is the same as used in extracting aluminum from Bauxite—by an electrolytic process.

Dr. Moore estimates a plant to produce 20 tons of alumina a day could be built for $150,000 and a pilot plant to get the process adapted to large-scale production would cost only $10,000.

The commission was awarded at Fort Lawton, Washington, where Lieut. Richards has been stationed since war was declared.

Named in honor of Gen. John J. Pershing, Lieutenant Richards, who was bron during World War I and is now 23, enlisted in the National Guard in 1940, resigning from a Government position here to be inducted into the Army in January, 1941.

Two other local men who were given promotions at Keesler Field, Biloxi, Miss., are Pvt. Donald L. Kackley, who was promoted to corporal, and Corpl. Lawrence F. Jones, who was made a sergeant.

Cincinnati Blast Kills 4, Hurts 5

Cincinnati, July 15 (AP).—An explosion under Sycamore Street and only two blocks from downtown Fountain Square killed at least four persons and injured five shortly before midnight tonight, first reports from hospitals indicated.

Cause of the blast was not determined immediately, but witnesses said a sheet of yellow flame burst from under the basement of a three-story building of the Hodge Rent-a-Car business and flashed through a gaping hole torn in the street. Cars stored in the building were hurtled into the street or turned topsy-turvy. A huge tractor-trailer truck later was found on its side across Sycamore Street behind an upturned passenger automobile.

5 French Sentenced

London, July 15 (AP).—The German-controlled Brussels radio reported tonight that five Frenchmen had been sentenced to death at Lille for killing a German soldier.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Author of 'Mrs. Miniver' To Be Feted Here Today

Jan Struther Pauses Briefly in the Capital; 'Claudia' Cast Leaving Soon for the Coast; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

FOR THE DRAMA DESKS, this midweek, all paths seem to lead in the general direction of Sixteenth Street.

Yesterday afternoon, Manager Meakin of RKO-Keith's, hors-d'oeuvred Mary Byrne in the Carlton in celebration of her selection from among a host of governmental secretaries to play the role of secretary to Bob Hope in Sam Goldwyn's forthcoming production of "They Got Me Covered," costarring Dorothy Lamour. This afternoon, from four to six, in the same hostelry, the Loew executives are ladling high tea in honor of Jan Struther, distinguished author of "Mrs. Miniver."

JAN STRUTHER

Miss Struthers is reported to have expressed the belief—after an extended lecture tour in this country—that she could have discovered the Miniver family almost anywhere in the United States quite as easily as in England. It will be interesting, if true, to hear the former member of the London Times staff elaborate this view. In the present circumstances, it also will be important, since, to date, no novel or motion picture has come along on this side to signalize America's wholehearted consecration to an all-out war effort.

It is, of course, too early in this country's active participation in the war as a belligerent to expect any book or play to reflect a national state of mind that has not yet been created. "Mrs. Miniver," in its screen manifestation, affords a magnificently restrained study in British fortitude among those upon whose doorsteps the war long since has descended. So, in modified degree and different manner, does the screen version of Eric Knight's "This Above All." The basis for a comparable work does not as yet exist within our own boundaries. Just one brief shower of enemy bombs on our shores presumably would create it.

Perhaps Miss Struther's extensive coverage of the United States has indicated to her precisely what would happen in the American mind in the event of such a violent "awakening." In any case, it won't hurt to ask.

No sooner had we had all paths leading up Sixteenth Street, as above, than one of them was deflected over to the Northeast. Father Gilbert V. Hartke of the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, it was who mapped the detour. William Saroyan, he said, evidently didn't quite finish his novel by yesterday noon, so couldn't get down for last night's opening performance of C. U.'s repeat production of his play, "Jim Dandy." He will be here tonight. Not only that. He will be accompanied by Leonard Lyons, The Post's Broadway columnist, and probably will have time to drop a few crumbs of wisdom to the boys and girls of the press, following the fall of the final curtain. Or maybe not. You never can tell about Saroyan. You can't tell him, either. He tells you!

And "Poor Butterfly" Golden Was Going to Close It!

Comes a note from Hampshire House, 150 Central Park South, New York, under date of July 14:

"Dear Nelson Bell: A good friend in Washington sent me your very nice article about 'Claudia.' Did you ever know such an industry as 'Claudia' has become? As things go these days, we are practically having careers in it! However, we are leaving for San Francisco July 25. Thank you very much for all your kindnesses and generosity over the years. And all good wishes. Sincerely, FRANCES STARR."

We shall never get over the fact that Producer John Golden was so fearful the true worth of the play wouldn't show through its surface comedy that he had in mind closing it the Saturday night of its first Washington engagement, without ever taking it into New York. And now look at it! Up there on the theater's honor list of long-run hits.

Since we mentioned "The Miracle" casually here no longer ago than yesterday, it is no more than fair to recall that the Warner Brothers feel the time is ripe to picturize this work so masterfully produced on the stage by Max Reinhardt and the late Morris Gest. Samson Raphaelson, who recently completed "The Constant Nymph" for the Warners, has been engaged to convert Karl Volmoeller's original script into a screen play and Edmund Goulding will direct. Tentative plans are to release the picture next Easter. It is Herr Volmoeller Father Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, is so anxious to see released from a concentration camp.

Since the flag is red, white and blue, and Managing Director Harry Anger wishes to personify each color by an equal number of girls, there will be 18 Roxyettes dancing on the Earle stage, come Friday, instead of the usual 16. The patriotic number promises to be so spectacular that two of the Roxyettes scheduled to go on vacation voluntarily relinquished their holiday just to be in it. It will be danced to the music of "The Dawn Patrol."

With Jimmy Dorsey and His Orchestra the headline stage attraction for the new week, Loew's Capitol Theater is opening its doors today at 10:30 a. m., with five stage shows to follow at 12 noon, 2:15, 4:30, 7:05 and 9:20 p. m.

young Columbia player with a bit of a twinkle about her, who is currently cavorting on the West Coast sound stages in the title role of the film version of Max Gordon's Broadway stage success, "My Sister Eileen." HEDDA HOPPER

Fountain of Youth!

Hollywood, Calif., July 15. They say a criminal always returns to the scene of the crime. Well, Lana Turner is no criminal, but Producer Pan Berman is putting her right back at the soda fountain from whence she came—this time behind the counter. She goes from there to clerking in a 5 and 10 cent store, has a row with her boy friend, leaves a note which might suggest that she's committing suicide, arrives in New York, can't find a job, pretends she's a victim of amnesia, and is claimed by an old gentleman as his long-lost daughter. The name of it is "Nothing Ventured," written by Irene Hamilton and Ian Hunter.

Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray were mired in mud up to their ears in "No Time for Love." Finally showered off, they got a respite and went outside the sound stage to enjoy a game of gin-rummy with MacMurray, beating Claudette, who came out with this crack: "My grandfather had a word for this—'tears are now dripping out of both ears!'"

I lunched with Jeanette MacDonald just before she took off for the hottest tour of her career. She'll visit 12 Army camps, through Texas to Missouri, and give her entire concert outdoors in each.

In the fall she'll do 12 concerts for Army Emergency Relief. After that, she'll probably book a concert tour for herself. When I asked what her next picture would be, she said, "I have no idea."

But it's got to be a good story, and she doesn't care who has it. She's only been on a picture-to-picture basis at Metro for the last two years.

On her birthday, Nelson Eddy brought her the bust he made of her . . . Gene Raymond writes he's very happy in England—they're getting plenty to eat, he loves the country. It's the first time he's ever been over there.

Nancy Kelly, after appearing with Gertie Lawrence in "Skylark," came here, was hailed as the find of the year and was rushed into $5,000,000 worth of pictures before ever being seen on the screen. Because she was inexperienced, she developed some idiosyncrasies that weren't very appealing.

Then she's had her ups and downs during her love, marriage and divorce from Edmund O'Brien.

I don't know whether it's a reconciliation, but Anne Shirley and John Payne have been spending a great deal of time together on the beach at Santa Monica, and their friends are hoping.

This business of making pictures about current events causes plenty of conflict, and it looks as if there's another feud in the making. This time the subject is American nurses on Bataan.

Both Paramount and Republic have announced their intentions of filming the subject, and it'll be a race to see who gets there first.

New York, July 15.

METROPOLITAN OPERA COMPANY: Kirsten Flagstad's friends report that she and her husband have escaped from Norway and now are in Sweden . . . COL. WILLIAM J. DONOVAN: Isn't it true that your next assignment will be to head a joint Army and Navy board of strategists? . . . SENATOR LODGE: Representative Lyndon Johnson of Texas, who is a lieutenant commander, distinguished himself in a foray Down Under. The story soon will be released . . . ROBERT E. SHERWOOD: During last week's blackout in New York, the Office of War Information kept its lights burning. The policeman on the beat issued a summons for this violation. He didn't know who was responsible—and therefore issued the summons in your name.

ARMY EMERGENCY RELIEF: Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" will net $40,000 a week profit. Michael Curtiz will direct the movie adaptation. And because Warner Bros. voluntarily altered the contract and surrendered all profit, Berlin will present to them, for this picture, all the biographical material he had saved—the music of "Yip, Yip, Yaphank," etc.—for which all studios had been bidding . . . EQUITY: Shepard Traube, who produced and directed "Angel Street," has decided upon his next New York show. It's "Winter Soldier," by a new author, Dan James . . . D. W. GRIFFITH: Lillian Gish returns to Hollywood for a new film career.

J. EDGAR HOOVER: Although Harry Hopkins tried to keep his romance a secret from the President, Roosevelt knew about it from his own detective sources. When Hopkins told the President: "I'm taking Churchill out tonight. I want him to meet a girl I'm interested in," the President said: "I know all about it, Harry. Her name is Louise Macy" . . . JOHN VAN DRUTEN: Pat Hitchcock, who became a star last season in your "Solitaire," will return to Broadway in the fall—despite the fact that her illustrious father, Director Alfred Hitchcock, describes all actors as "Oxen" . . . SERGT. SIDNEY KINGSLEY: Four of your "Dead End" boys have enlisted.

ALFRED LUNT: The "Margarita Pine" who appeared in blackface during your auditions for "The Pirate" last week, and who fled when you agreed to accompany her on the piano, was Peggy Wood of "Blithe Spirit" . . . PUBLICISTS GUILD: Hardly an American magazine is published these days without some photo of Jinx Falkenburg. Bob Taplinger, her former swain, who now is her press agent, says of Jinx: "She believes in Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Look." MAJ. FRANK CAPRA: The M. G. M. studios now offer a bonus to any of its contract writers who delivers an original story which can be used either as a service or a morale picture.

OSCAR STRAUS: Alan Jones, the film star who has been appearing at Carnegie Hall in "The Chocolate Soldier," will tour the country in another oldtime favorite, "The Student Prince" . . . NIGHT CLUB OWNER'S ASSOCIATION: Billy Rose's next revue, at his Diamond Horseshoe, will be the story of a horse—a derby winner which finally winds up in front of a milk wagon . . . GEORGE ABBOTT: Suzanne Dlugoszowski, whose father, the Polish general and diplomat, committed suicide here a few days ago—because he was considered too old to fight for his country—is trying to find solace in the theater. She's 20, pretty and wants to become an actress.

BROADWAY ASSOCIATION: The United States Army will prosecute ticket speculators who sell "This Is the Army" tickets at more than a 75-cent premium . . . GENERAL ARNOLD: John Steinbeck has returned to Los Gatos to write his Air Corps story. It will be a short book—about 35,000 words.

'Jim Dandy' Repeats at C. U.; Saroyan to Be Present Tonight

"In the daytime there is light and at night, darkness." Which no doubt you already know, but if you want to be made aware of this and many other simple facts relating to the enjoyment of life, then we suggest you pay a visit to Catholic University, where the University Theater again is presenting William Saroyan's "Jim Dandy."

Subject of so many controversial discussions, Saroyan has been both petted and shouted down by wiser heads than ours. For ourselves, we found "Jim Dandy" to be an amazing, enjoyable and fascinating evening in the theater.

To look for a plot, or even to pretend to yourself that there is one, is a pure waste of time. The only way to view a Saroyan play is to sit back, relax and let the emotions fall where they may.

Any sort of word picture of "Jim Dandy" would be impossible. The play takes place in the reading room of the library in San Francisco. Or any place else. From there on, all rules are barred and any semblance of contemporary drama is purely unintentional. This play can be anything you want it to be.

The cast features some excellent acting, with Charles Steinmetz as the fabulous Jim Dandy, who is you and I. Our personal favorite was Eugene Lerner, as Fishkin, a pessimist who lives unhappily because he sees the truth and speaks it. Mimi Norton and Elinor Oliver are both exceedingly graceful in the two feminine roles. Leo Brady comports himself with his customary enthusiasm as an optimistic member of the human race.

The remaining roles are filled by Pat Davis, James Lithgow, Tommy Shields and Joseph Belfiore. The production is excellent to the last detail.

A bow to Alan Schneider for handling so well the play, people and setting.

"Jim Dandy" will run for four performances through Saturday.

Over long distance phone yesterday, Mr. Saroyan expressed his definite intention to come to the Capital today to witness the C. U. performance of his play tonight.

Ginger for Those 'Gay Nineties!'

Hollywood, July 15 (INS).—Surprise! Ginger Rogers is the Gibson girl! This Queen of the Gay Nineties, in drawings, has been discussed by every studio as a film story, but RKO has actually bought the rights to all of Charles Dana Gibson's drawings from the artist himself who, at the age of 75, is still very much alive. This gives RKO the right to use any and all of the famous sketches which were so popular in the days when the leg o' mutton sleeves and the early pompadour were the fashion.

GINGER ROGERS

David Hempstead, who arranged the deal, and who will produce "The Gibson Girl," will tell the life of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson in the movie. Mrs. Gibson was Irene Langhorne, famous Virginia beauty and sister of Lady Astor. The Langhorne girls—there were five of them—were reigning beauties. Gibson used his wife as the model and her slim figure with the patrician face was considered the last word in feminine loveliness.

I had such a nostalgic feeling when I read "Meet Me in St. Louis," about the Smith family, that I wanted to get on the telephone and call them all—Mrs. Smith, Rose, Esther and Sally Benson, who wrote the book about her family. Arthur Freed told me that he has put Judy Garland in the re of the 17-year-old Rose. When I knew Rose, she was older, but still a beauty. She was the oldest of the Smiths. Esther was second—a pretty girl, too. Sally calls herself "Toots" in the book—her nickname.

I remember so well watching General Pershing's triumphant parade down Fifth Avenue from the Smith window when he returned from the World War. Agnes Smith, my particular friend, and I waved frantically at Pershing.

Paramount is preparing "Hostages," a movie drama dealing with the killing of Reinhard Heydrich, the brutal hangman whose death was a matter of rejoicing. "Of course, Heydrich is only incidental to the screen play, but his death is in back of the experiences that befall a group of persons held in Prague as hostages. The 29-year-old author, Stefan Heyn, a refugee himself, hadn't finished the last chapter when Para bought his novel from the galley proofs. But the movies so often write their own endings that I suppose itt doesn't matter.

The average actor is superstitious about any good luck omen. Ten years ago Humphrey Bogart played one of Jack La Rue's henchmen in "Three on a Match." After that, Bogey had a lot of luck and things didn't break so well for Jack. Now Jack's coming on the Warner lot for his comeback in "The Desert Song"—and Bogey is going to play a "bit" in the picture in the fond hope that Dame fortune will do her stuff for Jack. But Bogart won't be doing "bits" long. Hal Wallis has bought "Men Without a Country," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, for him (don't confuse this with "The Man Without a Country"), an adaptation of "Sans Patrie," a French story, dealing with five prisoners in French Guiana who escape and join the Free French forces.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: The Abe Finkels are separating. She is Paul Muni's sister; reports are current that Vivien Leigh is returning to Hollywood for a brief stay; Paulette Goddard, who has been in Mexico again, is back in town flying around in a midget automobile; Bonita Granville's illness has reconciled her and Jackie Cooper, and he is an every-evening visitor at her home.

Mary Astor, 'tis whispered, is putting her name on a long-term Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract August 15; Louis Hayward is on his way to Quantico, Va., where he'll be a sergeant in the Marines; Mary Martin, stung by a bee, has a lip that looks like Maurice Chevalier's; Betty Davis and Arthur Farnsworth narrowly escaped a serious accident when a tree in Laurel Canyon almost fell on their car.

The Ronald Colmans have moved into a three-room cottage on their Santa Barbara estate and have eliminated the servant problem by doing their own work; Ann Sothern is out of the hospital.

Arch Villain

John Carradine plays the role of Martin Caswell, arch villain in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Gambler's Choice," featuring James Craig, Patricia Dane and Bill Lundigan.

The fast-moving frontier drama is a tale of a gambler and a Northwest Mounted Policeman.

Pix

In sharp contrast with the ordinary French film which is seen in this country, excellent thought it may be, is the very delightful "Three Waltzes," a gay musical, being shown through Saturday at the Pix.

The enchanting personality of Yvonne Printemps, who is known to American audiences for her performance in Noel Coward's "Conversation Piece," moves gracefully through a light story of three generations of two families, whose ultimate happiness materialized with the joining of the two surviving present-day descendants. Beginning with the unhappy affair between Grandmother Grandpres and Colonel de Chalanceys, the picture traces the history of these two families whose youngest members are always drawn to each other like the proverbial "bee to the honey."

Seen opposite Miss Printemps is Pierre Fresnay who plays his triple role with considerable dexterity. As a chantuese Miss Printemps lends her lovely voice and charming manner to multiply the charm of the film.

The music throughout is supplied by the Johann Strauss, junior and senior, plus additional waltzes by the unrelated Oscar Strauss.

Tschaikovsky's "Swan Lake" is the subject of a two-minute short which sees the popular ballet performed by members of the Moscow Ballet Theatre. E. L. S.

Little

By common consent still one of the "10 best pictures," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Philip Barry's stage play of "The Philadelphia Story" reappears on the screen at the Little Theater as chief feature for the new week. The bill is augmented by "Hidden Hunger," one of the most widely-heralded and most important of the Government short-reel subjects bearing upon the success of the war effort.

The Barry comedy is notable not only for the deftness of its romantic uses of the newshounds, Mainliners and a scrambled love affair amongst the Quaker City elite, but equally for the fact that it presents Katharine Hepburn in the role she created on the stage. Her support is superlative. James Stewart, Cary Grant and Ruth Hussey lead a cast that includes such other masters of comedy, drama and pure whimsy as John Howard, Roland Young, John Halliday, Mary Nash and Virginia Weidler. Their combined efforts result in superfine entertainment that has been embellished with one of M.-G.-M.'s glossiest productions and George Cukor's superior direction.

The Federal Security Agency's release of "Hidden Hunger" as an official film of the National Nutrition Program stars Walter Brennan, three-time Academy Award winner, supported by Lloyd Corrigan and Joyce Coyles.

The story has its genesis on the farm, where the tiller of the soil is looking over his crops when he is accosted by the Little Man and plunged into a discussion of the various aspects of feeding a nation to fullest advantage in days of stress.

Either feature is worth seeing more than once. Together they comprise a bill that is something pretty special.

C. Curtice McCain, First Auditor Of ICC, Dies

C. Curtice McCain, 86, first auditor of the Interstate Commerce Commission, died at his home in East Orange, N. J., Tuesday.

Mr. McCain started his career with the railroads in 1877 as a clerk in the Trunk Line Association, which was then being organized by four principal Eastern railroads to settle rate wars and controversies. He soon became chief clerk there and 10 years later was appointed to the ICC as auditor, his chief duties being the organization of the Commission's Tariff Bureau.

In 1895 the freight lines on the Great Lakes chose him to organize their traffic association. He served as commissioner with them until 1907, when the Eastern railroads asked him to return to New York to become chairman of the Trunk Line Association, with which he had started 30 years before as a clerk. He continued with the association until he retired in 1934. After Mrs. McCain's death in 1933, he had lived with a son in East Orange.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he was admitted with second and third degree burns. His condition last night was said to be serious.

WPB Holding Classes For All, Even $1 Men

A new employe at the War Production Board—whether it be a wealthy dollar-a-year man or a $1260 typist—is likely to be sent back to school, WPB is so fast-moving and complex that it is just about impossible for the average human to keep pace with it. An intensive training program appears to be the answer. The dollar-a-year man will be taught how to make out a Government expense account as well as details on the complicated M orders and PRP plan. He will be taught how to get personnel, how to fill out job classification sheets. He will be told of the broad economic aspects of the war program. The key men of WPB already have attended the school.

Just the other day WPB hired Frank Patterson to teach officials how to think and talk on their feet. Patterson has been associated with Dale Carnegie. The schools are supervised by Dr. E. E. Pratt, who has been teaching WPB officials the mysteries of priorities for more than a year. Pratt recently was appointed to head the new and enlarged training division. He has had experience as both a teacher and a practical businessman. He was a professor of foreign trade at Columbia University and before he joined WPB he was in the export business for the Chrysler Corporation.

Continuous Revision

No one graduates from Pratt's schools. WPB is ever-changing and his classes are on a continuous basis. Each month the study program is revised to bring students up to date on WPB orders, amendments and other changes. These classes are for officials. Other classes are held for new employes for half a day on each Tuesday and Friday. Employes whose starting salaries are $2000 and under are assigned to one class and the higher-paid professional and technical people to another. Each group is given a brief history of WPB and its objectives. Phone operators are given training before they are put on the job. Stenographers and typists are given courses to brush up their skills.

Each month the training division sends instructors to the field to keep regional officials informed of the latest WPB developments. Classes are held Saturdays and Sundays. Field employes also are sent here to attend classes. New officials are now given a brief written history of WPB which gives them the high spots and a talking knowledge of the agency. The instructors are WPB officials who are experts in their field. For example, Luther Gulick, who mapped the recent reorganization of WPB, will explain it to the class today. Donald Nelson is a frequent lecturer.

Checks Delayed

Most of the new war agencies paid off yesterday. Checks were delayed at the Board of Economic Warfare but will be distributed today. Checks for employes at the National Institute of Health were delayed again for no apparent reason . . . Robert D. Leigh, president of Bennington College, is the new director of the Foreign Broadcast Monitoring Service. He succeeds Lloyd Free who is in the Army . . . The assistant fingerprint classifier exam will be held on July 20. Radio inspector test will be given the following day . . . The war bond campaign is under way at the Civil Service Commission.

Several hundred Government information men and their wives attended a preview of Government films the other night at a private showing. The films were good enough but the audience was given a real treat afterward when hard-hitting Bob Horton, War Information official, lit into the newsreels. Newsreels representatives were present and they answered in kind. Kindly Lowell Mellett, who sponsored the meeting, was embarrassed. Incidentally, Mellett, who is the Government's movie coordinator, is reported to have said that it is his hope to have every theater show one Government picture a week.

Karl Brandt will resign as economic adviser to Agriculture Secretary Wickard to return to Leland Stanford . . . David Meeker and several other Agriculture officials are flying to Mexico City to meet Wickard. They are working on a plan to permit Mexican labor to help harvest American crops . . . Tomorrow is the last day for Federal workers to submit columns to the Federal Diary contest

Cut in Price Of Gasoline Is Expected

Jones Discloses U. S. Will Subsidize Transportation of Oil Into Shortage Area

By the United Press

Nullification of the recent 2½-cent-a-gallon gasoline price increase in the Eastern rationing area appeared certain last night after Secretary of Commerce Jones disclosed the Government will subsidize transportation of gas, fuel oil and kindred products into the shortage area.

He made his announcement after Senator Russell (Democrat), Georgia, had revealed the plan to the Senate and Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, charged that Jones had taken the first step "in a gigantic subsidy program" without legal authority.

Byrd asserted that Jones should be brought before Congress to cite his authority for the "300 million dollars" venture which, it was declared, will be expanded to other industries if Price Czar Leon Henderson has his way.

Russell said the subsidy arrangement has President Roosevelt's approval. It was expected to mean that soon the price of gasoline in the ration area—17 States and the District of Columbia—will return to the level in effect before Henderson authorized the increase to cover the extra cost of hauling petroleum products overland instead of by ocean tanker.

RFC to Absorb Pool Arrears

An OPA spokesman said that Jones' RFC will absorb arrears in the petroleum pool transportation fund as well as future increased costs. Companies in the recently formed pool agreed that their aggregate losses would be apportioned among them, with the understanding that they eventually would be reimbursed by the Government.

Byrd said the cost to the RFC—and ultimately the taxpayers—will be between 250 million dollars and 300 million dollars.

Jones pointed out that unless the necessary petroleum products can be moved into the Eastern States, not only will the civilian population suffer from lack of fuel to heat their homes, "but the great amount of war production in this area will be seriously retarded."

This view was subscribed to by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt. He said it was "manifestly unfair that the East should bear the entire burden of increased cost and shortage."

Sharing of War Condition

"This is a war condition that should be shared by the entire country," he declared.

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri challenged Jones' action, while Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas called it "the most extraordinary proposition that has been offered in this Congress this session."

Russell and Senator Maloney (Democrat) of Connecticut said the authority was contained in the price control act with respect to subsidies for strategic and critical materials, and in the authority setting up the defense supplies corporation, the RFC subsidiary which will absorb the price increase.

Russell said the action "recognizes the contention that this (the increased cost of transporting petroleum) is a national question which grows out of the war and that no selected area should bear the cost."

Woodrow McKants Accused of Murder By Strangulation

Woodrow McKants, 24-year-old Negro, of 635 Columbia Road Northwest, was charged with murder late yesterday after a coroner's jury held him for grand jury action in connection with the strangulation of Wallace B. Hulse, 50, of 318 Eleventh Street Southwest.

The victim was found dead in his home last Saturday.

Detectives arrested McKants, Sunday and the latter signed a statement admitting the crime. Sergt. E. E. Scott of the homicide squad testified at the inquest that McKants told him he went to Hulse's home to collect a numbers bet. Hulse denied that he owed the man any money and a fight ensued, it was stated.

According to Scott, the defendant said he struck Hulse first with his fist and on the head with an adding machine, and then strangled him with a piece of sash cord "when he started to groan."

Andre Kostelanetz Conducts, Lily Pons Sings at Watergate

By Ray C. B. Brown

Andre Kostelanetz conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the seventy-seventh "Sunset Symphony Concert" at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night for the benefit of Army Emergency Relief and Navy Relief. Soloist: Lily Pons. Program: Overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila" (Glinka), "Regnava nel silenzio" from "Lucia di Lammermoor" (Donizetti), "Clair de Lune" (Debussy), "Parade and "Waltz" (Ibert), "Una voce poco fa" from "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" (Rossini), "A Lincoln Portrait" (Copland), "The Spirit of Liberty" (Townsend), "Ou va la jeune Hindoue" from "Lakme" (Delibes).

Lily Pons and Andre Kostelanetz, who donated their talents last evening at the special concert of the National Symphony Orchestra for the benefit of Army and Navy Relief, must have felt fully rewarded by the cordial enthusiasm of the thousands assembled at the Potomac Watergate. Leaving the question of how many thousands to be answered by skilled enumerators, be it said that no more people could have been accommodated unless chairs had been taken away and aisles abolished to make room for a close-pressed, standing crowd. All seats were preempted, and standees two and three deep lined the top of the Watergate steps, the parapet of the Arlington Memorial Bridge to the middle of the third span, and the balustrade of the river drive, while the lawn to the west of the Lincoln Memorial was filled with seated listeners who had foregone sight of the barge and the musicians, and canoes and watercraft fringed the shore.

As though sympathetic with the occasion, weather conditions combined into a perfect summer evening of temperate serenity. When the concert began shortly after sunset, a few clouds tinged amber and golf rifted against a sky of tender blue shading into green, and as the program progressed, the aureate hue of the clouds was transformed into old rose. At the intermission the light had faded to an Argentine gloaming that turned the river into shimmering quicksilver, and the thin crescent of a new moon hovered over the Virginia hills. Auditors could not but become spectators as well of a lovely nocturnal scene, and the natural beauty of the concert site was never more in evidence.

Mr. Kostelanetz began his program with the familiar overture to Glinka's "Ruslan and Liudmila," which he energetically urged into the liveliest pace of which the orchestra was capable. That did no harm to the overture, and, in fact, enhanced the infectious quality of its gay animation. Miss Pons chose for her first aria not the mad scene from "Lucia di Lammermoor," which she frequently uses in concert, but the less threadbare and more attractive double cavatina from the first act: "Regnava nel silenzio" and "Quando rapita in estasi." Her voice was in excellent clarity as to timbre and at its apex of flexibility.

The next orchestral number was the conductor's transcription of Debussy's "Clair de Lune," a praiseworthy piece of instrumentation without any of the harmonic meadlings which have become known as the "Kostelanetz manner." This was followed by two divertisements by Jacques Ibert, "Parade" and "Waltz," both of them appreciably satirical in intention. Miss Pons closed the first half of the program with "Una voce poco fa" in as fine a reading as she has ever sung.

Receiving its first local performance, Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," in which musical limning is eked out with sentences from letters and speeches of the martyred President, spoken on this occasion by William Adam, proved to be, for at least one listener, a disappointing work. Comments which one had read after the premiere on May 15 in Cincinnati had led to the expectation of a striking delineation with a strong emotional impact. This music is, however, too discordant and too modern in idiom to depict the simplicity and strength of Lincoln; one's attention is distracted from the subject by the fussiness of the orchestration. Although the composer probably did not intend it that way, the best part of the work is the background section to which some sense of reality is imparted by the use of Stephen Foster's "Camptown Races" and the old ballad of "Springfield Mountain" as source material for themes.

In compliment to the composer, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, and the lyricist, Yvonne Townsend, Miss Pons introduced here for the first time in patriotic song, "The Spirit of Liberty," which has a spirited tune and a timely text. Her last offering was the "Bell Song" from "Lakme," but the vast audience would not take that as the final work. The soprano was tumultously recalled again and again until she responded with three extra numbers: Ponce's "Estrellita," Poldini's "Dancing Doll" and a version of the "Blue Danube" waltz.

The teacher has flown more than one million miles and since the war began has surveyed both coasts for 150 miles inland. She came to the CAA in 1934.

Furniture Pondered for Girls' Dorms

But Dressing Table Stools Are Out; PBA Due to Ask For Bids This Week

By Christine Sadler

Mathematicians of the Public Buildings Administration were busy with slide rules yesterday working out specifications for furniture to go in the 31 dormitories to be erected in local and nearby parks for Government girls.

Bids will be asked this week, PBA officials said. They will cover 15,000 single and double decker beds manufactured to fit in the special-sized "cubicles"—and an accompanying number of mirrors, chairs, lamps and chests of drawers. One thing they will not cover will be dressing table stools. Girls the age of Washington's war workers prefer to stand while powdering their faces, according to the PBA. Besides, a stool would take up more room and might make the girls late for work.

Just which agency will build the 1000 permanent houses authorized recently for war-working families has not been decided yet by the National Housing Agency, but it is expected to be PBA. The Alley Dwelling Authority is already building 3000 demountable homes for war families, however, and might be given this additional assignment.

Getting locations for the 1000 proposed homes will call for much planning and reshuffling, as new sections without utilities are ruled out. All must be built in areas where pipe lines and lights already are available—because of priorities on utility materials.

Various types of houses are expected to be built. Some will be row houses, some "flats," some double, and some detached. Some units will have only one bedroom, some two, and some three.

Nine hundred of the units will be for white families and the remaining 100 for colored families, housing officials said yesterday.

Not all locations of dormitories have yet been "staked down" to definite streets, although all sites have been selected generally. There is still some discussion as to just where in East Potomac Park to place the cornerstones, for instance.

In Arlington County, two dormitories will be erected, one "adjacent" to the new National Airport and the other east of Arlington Ridge Road and just north of the new War Department building. In West Potomac Park the buildings will go between the river and the Tidal Basin—or just where the golf course is.

The Langston Stadium site for colored war workers is on the southeast corner of Oklahoma Avenue and Twenty-first Street Northeast. The "Stadium" site for white workers is off East Capitol Street near the National Guard Armory. In Suitland, Md., the structures will be immediately adjacent to the buildings erected there recently for Census Bureau workers.

Senate Group Set to Pass on Blackout Law

A meeting of the Senate District Committee, to rush action on the House-approved District blackout law amendment, was scheduled yesterday for 10:30 a. m. Monday.

Chairman McCarran, now in the West, directed that the bill be placed before the committee at the earliest possible date in a wire to Renah F. Camalier, committee counsel, and the meeting was called upon receipt of his message.

In McCarran's absence, the hearing is to be conducted by Senator D. Worth Clark (Democrat) of Idaho.

The pending legislation authorizes the city to borrow a second million dollars for civilian defense financing, and grants plenipotentiary powers over private property to the Commissioners for the duration.

Under its provisions the city heads could requisition property of any kind if they felt such action necessary for the city's protection, and they would be given broad authority to make whatever rules and regulations required for the prosecution of the defense program.

Harland Retiring

Jaywalking On Wane, Expert Says

Washington pedestrians have undergone a tremendous change in the last ten years, says William Henry Harland, retiring senior engineering aide to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic—and it's a change for the better.

Harland, who received a portable radio and a scroll from Traffic Department employes yesterday in honor of his retirement, has been watching the zigs and zags of jaywalkers since 1927, when he was made director of traffic when the unit was in the District Police Department.

Responsible for Those Signs

He is responsible for working out the intricate electrical "Walk" and "Don't Walk" devices at downtown corners, and hence has spent the last decade in observing pedestrians' reactions—or lack of them.

"People who jaywalk are suffering more from absent-mindedness than from any real intention to disobey the law," he said. "The police force's work in educating the public has gone a long way toward changing its mental outlook, which accounts for the great improvement I've noticed."

All Type Jaywalk

Jaywalking is not practiced by any particular type of person, he added—dowagers and their debutante daughters, working girls, children, elderly men, all are likely to be equally guilty when their attention is focused on some other matter. Nor has he noticed that women are more prone to jaywalk than men or vice versa; it about 50-50, he figures.

Harland, born in New Jersey in 1870, is married and lives at 1402 Perry Place Northwest. His retirement is to become effective October 1, but he is leaving now to take accumulated leave.

Action Assured On Charity Tax Measure

Senate District Committee action aimed at halting the District's restoration of educational, religious and charitable institutions to the tax rolls will be taken in the near future, Chairman McCarran promised yesterday.

He indicated in a message to Committee Counsel R. F. Camalier that he would begin hearings on the possibility of revising the law as soon as he returns to Washington from the West.

Spurred by the recent restoration of many such institutions to a taxable status, the Senate Committee launched a study of the matter several weeks ago at McCarran's direction.

Camalier has been working on posible legislative steps with local officials, and it was understood that a bill reestablishing exemption rights is in the final stages of preparation. Camalier also said that he intended to communicate with representatives of various affected institutions and hospitals and have full material on the question ready for presentation to the committee when McCarran gets back.

Under the present system, he asserted, many institutions are unable to qualify as "purely charitable institutions," the requirement set forth in the law as now written.

The problem of the taxable status of the institutions was also attacked in the House last week by Representative Hunter (Democrat) of Ohio who asked local officials to prepare a clarification of the exemption requirements.

Several weeks ago we warned Washington that the WPB order curtailing the use of metal for beer bottle caps to 70% of last year, plus the inevitable withdrawal from this market of distant breweries, would result in a decrease of 50% of beer containers for the greatly increased Washington population. Our analysis of conditions to come has proved correct. Since that time, 3 breweries have completely withdrawn their brands from this city . . . and others have radically curtailed supply. It is more urgent now than before that you accept your beer in the QUART BOTTLE. It is the ONLY answer to adequate supply of beer in this city.

And if you find this change just a bit inconvenient, remember, WE'RE AT WAR. Soothe your feelings with this little ditty (composed by our staff) to the tune of "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby"

We can't give you anything but QUARTS, Mister.
1 Cap does the work of 3 in QUARTS, Mister.
Buy this size, economize and save metal, too.

Save the caps to beat the Japs, buy QUARTS, Mister.
And make the world a better place FOR YOU.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Socrates, or Shakespeare, or maybe it was Mickey Mouse, once said that a man who can be flattered ought not to be praised, and so there can be faint praise for the Boston Red Sox who have recently butched up their chances of overhauling the Yankees.

POVICH

The suspicion now is that the Red Sox were conned out of three straight games by Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns who delivered the smartest quotes of the season the other day. Moving into Boston with his club, Sewell told newspapermen, "The Red Sox look like a great club. I think they'll beat the Yankees out for the pennant." Thus softening up the Red Sox with that bit of flattery, Sewell led his Browns to three straight victories over Boston.

That horrible series with the Browns may well have cost the Red Sox the pennant. In last Sunday's double-header, with the Fenway Park scoreboard already showing that the Yankees had lost the first game to Detroit, the Red Sox blew their first game against the Browns. And then they dropped the second. That was no way to act for a team that was supposed to be in the pennant fight, but the Red Sox hit a new low for the season when they dropped a third straight game to the Browns.

Only ten days ago, the Red Sox were threatening to make a hot race of it for the Yankees. They came back off a triumphant Western tour on which the Yankees had stumbled badly, and bumped off the Nats in four straight games at Fenway Park. They had cut down what had been a Yankee lead of 11 games to a mere three, and then they went into a three-game head-to-head series with the Yanks. They blew two of them, and as of yesterday afternon, the Yanks again were six games in front.

Baker Not in Awe of Yanks

Manager Del Baker of the Tigers has been stoutly maintaining all season that the Yanks are no super-club, and there is a lot of evidence to support him, including the fact that his own fourth-place Tigers have beaten the Yanks in more games than they have lost to the New York Club. "If we had last year's hitting, the Yankees wouldn't win the pennant; we would," says Baker.

It has been many years since managers around the league have spoken up so fearlessly against the Yanks. The same old defeatism isn't rampant. The other American League clubs are taking courage from the prolonged slumps of Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller, and are regarding the Yanks these days as just another ball team, albeit a pretty good one. But the new courage is a healthy sign. Matters have been pretty dreary during those seasons when too many clubs were licked by the Yankees before they even took the field against the Yanks.

The Red Sox, of course, are still in the fight, and not yet to be dismissed, with the season barely half over, Joe Cronin's pitching has improved, and his club was a victim of a batting let-down in the lamented series with the Browns. They don't have to beat out any super-club this year. The Yanks are having their troubles despite their lead.

The Yankees, though, have a way of helping themselves. Nobody outside of a violent ward would have ventured, a couple of months ago, that one Hank Borowy would be the leading pitcher on the Yankee staff in mid-July, but there he is with eight victories and one defeat. At a time when Ernie Bonham and Red Ruffing have been getting their bumps, young Borowy has come along to pitch some super-ball for Joe McCarthy and take up most of the slack.

Yankees Winning, With Struggle

Borowy wasn't even listed on the Yankees' American League roster when they went to camp this spring. The big noise among the Yankee pitching crop was John Lindell, up from their Newark farm, where he had won 23 games and lost only 10 last season. Borowy, a right-hander only a couple of years out of Fordham, wasn't supposed to rate with Lindell, but Lindell is now back in Newark and Borowy is the American League's leading pitcher.

The diminishing respect for the Yankees is actuated, of course, by the persistent failures of DiMaggio and Keller to untrack themselves. Their batting slumps now seem to have passed the temporary stage and are beginning to take on a degree of permanency, for at least this season. Without their big bats functioning in terrorizing fashion, the Yanks must struggle to win. And the other day, Buddy Hassett was benched by Joe McCarthy in a desperate move to get some more hitting into the line-up.

There used to be great doubt that the American League could assemble a team from among the other seven clubs that could beat the Yankees out in a pennant race, but that wouldn't be such a difficult task at this time. In fact, an American League pennant winner could be conscripted from the talent of only two other clubs, we think. Give the Red Sox Detroit's pitching, or the Tigers Boston's hitting, and we think you'd have a club that could knock the 1942 Yanks off without much trouble.

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 15.—This is a movie review of "The Pride of the Yankees." It's a good movie. Sometimes it is a deeply touching movie. It'll make you wince here and there, but all sports movies do that before they get through the Hollywood ringer. This one, the pictorial life of the late great Lou Gehrig, holds the wincing down closer to zero than any of us had reason to hope.

CONSIDINE

Paul Gallico, who knew and loved the big Dutchman, sat down with Eleanor Gehrig and interviewed her by the hour. Out of those interviews came a movie script. Then Jo Swerling and Herman Mankiewicz took it and with the aid of Sam Wood, the director, made it into film history. Somewhere en route the life of good old Lou got involved with a dance by Veloz and Yolanda. Also, Ray Noble pans in and out—playing the piano and leading a loud orchestra playing "Always."

But if you can overlook these almost incredible interruptions, you still have a good, sincere life of the ball player whose sickness and death sent a pang through the entire country. There is a little sugaring here and there, but the primary facts are there: Lou Gehrig, reared in an old-style German home where baseball was held in high contempt, worked his way through Columbia University, became a ball player instead of an engineer (like Uncle Otto), came up to the Yankees, fell in love with and married Eleanor Twitchell, became a great star, contracted a disease he couldn't pronounce and died.

Gary Cooper is simply wonderful as Lou. At first it's a little bit of a shock to see the thin, gaunt, nonathletic Cooper impersonating the big, gusty, muscular iron man. But that soon wears off. Cooper becomes Gehrig. Looks like him, actually, and it isn't because he affects the bow tie and the single-breasted suits that Lou wore. The fellow is just an actor fine enough to submerge his own personality into the personality of the man he portrays.

Sports people are sentimental. The night we saw it there was a deal of snuffling and handkerchief brandishing in the final scenes, which depict Lou on Gehrig Day, July 4, 1939, at the stadium. The event itself was unforgettably poignant. The film version is hardly less touching. Cooper gives that still--hard-to-believe valedictory which Lou himself gave that day at the home plate. In the hazy background of this most authentic bit of baseball history one can see the broad, flat, grief-stricken face of Babe Ruth and the sober solicitude of Bill Dickey. They were there when it happened, when Lou spoke his words in the big, hushed place and told that gigantic communion of fans about his wife, his mother and father and the men he knew and loved in baseball. Dickey and Ruth aren't really actors, but it must not have been hard to recapture the misery of that scene.

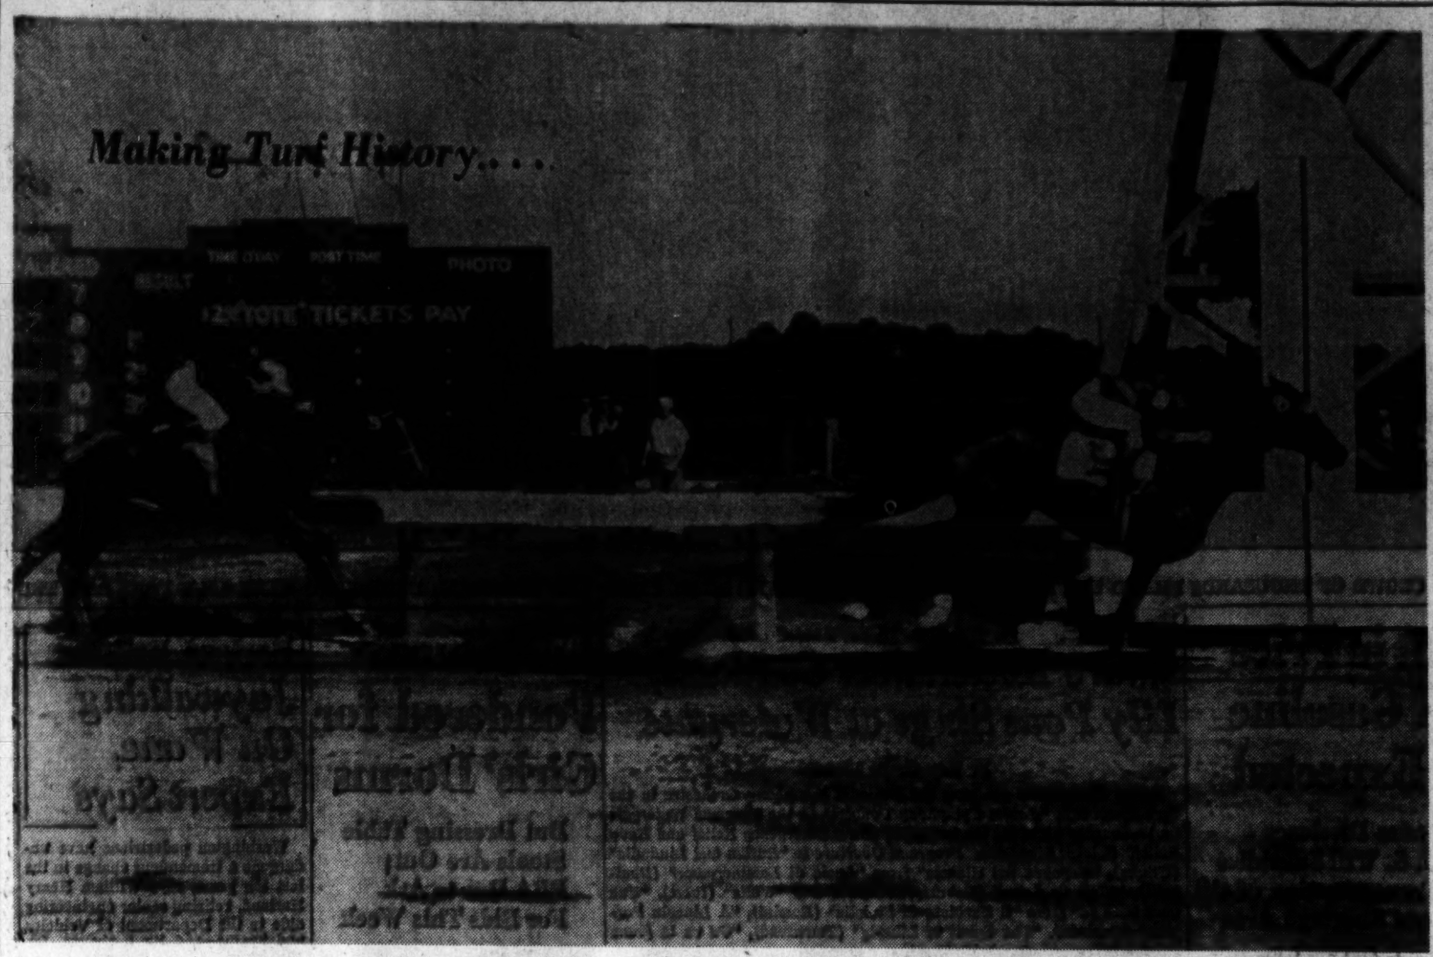
The picture has the best locker room scenes we ever saw on the screen. And grand, authentic train scenes. Things like these are tough to seize on celluloid. Gallico and the screen writers had good material, and what they lacked Ruth supplied with a rough and tumble impersonation of Ruth at his most hoydenish. The big guy is wonderful, just being himself.

For the benefit of the women, there is little of the technical side of baseball in this one. It's a love story, really. The old love story of a couple trying to live their own lives in spite of the overly zealous efforts of a mother-in-law to shape those lives. We thought that here and there the script was a little rough on the old lady, but it's true that there was some friction there in real life, and this film is documentary enough and frank enough to admit it. We found some of the love scenes between Lou and Eleanor a little hard to look at, too, especially a scene where they beat each other over the head with American Beauties while listing the other's attributes.

But one forgets that quickly enough, for it is at the conclusion of that bit of trying horseplay that Lou first senses that something is wrong with him. There is a kind of terror in the last third of the picture, as there was in the last months of his life.

We'll also forget the sportswriters. As usual, Hollywood has decided they are either crochety old Rotarian-greeter types, with mustaches, or brash young know-it-alls. The important things in Lou's life are in the film, and when the picture settles down to those intrinsic things it is as good a movie as you'll ever see.

Whirlaway Passes Seabiscuit's Earnings With Stretch Rush to Victory at Suffolk



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

WHIRLAWAY, BY TWO-AND-A-HALF was the result of the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap yesterday at Suffolk Downs, where Jockey George Woolf pushed the son of Blenheim II to victory after trailing the field by 11 lengths at one time. With the triumph, Whirly is now the turf's biggest all-time money winner—a total of $454,336

Whirly Sets New Record In Jinx Race

Warren Wright's Colt Wins $43,850, Nears Half-Million Mark in Earnings

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

Boston, July 15.—Whirlaway buried Seabiscuit's all-time money winning record deep in Suffolk Downs "graveyard of champions" today with a streak of lightning speed that all but set fire to the track.

Taking over the Biscuit's throne as the world champion breadwinner of the turf, the long-tailed Kentucky cannonball turned loose his "crusher" kick in one burst of running power to come from almost out of sight and win the rich Massachusetts Handicap faster than it ever has been done before.

And with the $43,850 pay-check he picked up as he zipped across the finish line, the colt they used to call crazy added enough to his earnings to give him a total of $454,336 for his 3½ years of racing, thereby wiping out the $437,730 mark the Biscuit took so long to pile up a few years back.

Wagon Load of Weight

What's more, the way Whirly did it—carry a wagon load of weight, running against a fancy set of front-flying "speed" horses and making his first trip over the Suffolk strip that has been disastrous for so many champions in the past—made it look more than ever as though he ban go on to become the turf's first half-million dollar baby in history.

For, make no mistake about this one—Warren Wright's whizzer had the deck stacked against him.

Yet, in spite of the 130 pounds on his back, in spite of the fact he was spotting the front-runners up to 32 pounds apiece, in spite of the fact he'd never tangled with Suffolk's "grave yard" before, Whirly came from 11 lengths back to hit the wire in 1:48 1-5 for the mile and an eighth, lopping two-fifths of a second off the track record War Relic chalked up in this stake a year ago.

Rounders Trails Whirly

At the finish, he had a clear edge of 2½ lengths on Rounders, the Irish-bred invader from Texas Emerson Woodward's barn—and the margin was getting bigger with every stride, so fast was he moving, to the accompaniment of roars of cheers from a jam-packed crowd of 33,000 customers who knocked Mr. Big Tail down to even money in the betting.

Another length farther back came Mrs. Parker Corning's speedy Attention, one-time Whirlaway jinx, and four lengths behind him was William Woodward's Apache, the tall, handsome 3-year-old who was a surprise starter in this race after setting a track record at Empire City last Saturday.

They were supposed to be the horses Whirly had to beat, because they're able to turn loose lightning, too, and Apache was carrying only 107 pounds while Attention had 123 aboard.

Well, Whirly made them holler "Uncle" completely and decisively. In fact, Trainer Ben Jones, the Missouri magician of the turf, said he

Whirly Entered In Arlington 'Cap

Boston, July 15 (AP).—Trainer Ben Jones said tonight that Whirlaway, who broke Seabiscuit's all-time money-winning record today by winning the Massachusetts Handicap, would be pointed for the $25,000 Added Arlington Handicap at Chicago's Arlington Park on August 1 as his next start.

Pofahl Fights in 10th, Beats Tigers in 11th

Second Baseman Has Bout With Bloodworth, Then Wins Night Game With Hit Before 7000

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Jimmy Pofahl, obviously undamaged by a tenth-inning fight with Jimmy Bloodworth of the Tigers last night, swatted an eleventh-inning single to center field to fetch Washington a 4-3 victory over the Detroit club.

The Pofahl-Bloodworth scuffle at second base highlighted the proceedings for the 7000 Griffith Stadium customers and threatened for a brief moment to precipitate a general melee between players of both teams who streamed from the dugouts.

Bloodworth landed solidly into Pofahl's lap with knees and spikes foremost on an attempt to steal second after leading off the tenth inning with a single, but the Nats' second baseman held onto the ball to make the put-out.

Pofahl then expressed himself by taking a firm stranglehold on the neck of the prone Bloodworth and giving it some ungentle twists. At this act, the occupants of the two dugouts started for the scene, where Umpires Ernie Stewart and Eddie Rommel already were trying to pry the pair apart.

The muscular Bloodworth shook off Pofahl and then, getting to his feet, grabbed the Nats' second baseman with a crotch-hold and hurled him high over his shoulder, to the ground. By that time players of both teams were tugging at their respective battlers, but showing no disposition to make it a free-for-all. In the best tradition of baseball "fights," not a fist was actually swung.

Neither Bloodworth, the former Nat, nor Pofahl were ejected from the game by the umpires. Pofahl obtained full revenge on the Tigers generally, an inning later, when his blow won the ball game for Pitcher Early Wynn, who went the full route for the Nats. Wynn outlasted Tommy Bridges and then hooked up with Hal White in an extra-inning duel.

White had one out in the eleventh

Browns Beat A's on Laabs' 4-Run Homer

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 15.—Chet Laabs' second-inning home run with the bases loaded sent the St. Louis Browns off to a flying start tonight and they went on to trounce the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 4.

In the next inning, Laabs slammed one of the longest hits of the year in Shibe Park to drive in another run, making his total for the evening five.

The Browns' first tallies came after Walt Judnich walked and Junior Stephens and Mike Chartak had both singled. Laabs then sent one sizzling into the upper left-field stands, 400 feet away.

His third-inning clout went into the deepest corner of center field, but the slugger was caught at the plate trying to stretch it into an inside-the-park homer. The blow scored Chartak, who had walked. Prior to that, Judnich, getting on with a single, came home when Bill Knickerbocker tossed Stephens' grounder past first base. Elmer Valdo's throw to cut off Judnich scooted under Bob Swift and rolled into the Athletics' dugout as Stephens followed Judnich across the plate.

Singles by Pitcher Dick Fowler, Mike Kreevich and Valo, along with Dick Siebert's fly gave the A's two runs in the third. Their other two came on a base on balls, a two-base error and two infield outs in the sixth.

Orval Grove Lost To Chisox Staff

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—The battered Chicago White Sox pitching staff today lost the services of Pitcher Orval Grove who will submit to a knee operation tomorrow or Friday and may be out of competition for two months.

An examination today disclosed a torn cartilege in the left knee, which has bothered the big rookie for some time and finally forced him to leave the club in the East. The Sox still are without the services of the veteran. Thornton Lee, who has been bothered with a sore arm since the start of the season. Another regular, John Rigney is in the Navy.

Neyland, Wade To Coach Army All-Star Team

By the Associated Press

New York, July 15.—Two college football coaches whose rivalry is almost a tradition will blend their talents in coaching the Army all-star squad for its series of games with National Pro League clubs in August and September.

Appointment of Col. Robert R. Neyland, formerly of Tennessee, and Maj. Wallace Wade, former Duke mentor, as leaders of the service athletes was announced today by Grantland Rice, president of the War Football Fund.

To date an eight-game schedule has been lined up, with the squad being split into two divisions. Major Wade will tutor the Western group and Colonel Neyland the Eastern players. It was pointed out, however, the two squads would work together closely, and players might be shifted back and forth as needed.

Details Not Settled

Numerous details are still to be worked out, such as to the way the squads will be split and how they will train, but it is known the coaches will have a complete squad of approximately 80 players, selected from the more than 1500 college and pro players nominated by two coaches in each of six sections who are familiar with the players' ability.

Major Wade, now stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., and Colonel Neyland with the Engineer Corps at Norfolk, Va., have histories similar in more than one respect.

Both served as officers in the first World War. Both became famed as football coaches after that affair at Southern schools that were torrid rivals. Colonel Neyland was head coach at Tennessee for 14 seasons between 1926 and 1940. Major Wade coached at Alabama and Duke, both schools rivals of Tennessee.

Neyland Has Edge

Added to the list of coincidences is the fact both men have contributed more than their share of teams to the New Year's Day Bowl classics.

Major Wade, a graduate of Brown, played in the 1916 Rose Bowl game against Washington, and has coached five Bowl elevens. His Alabama team beat Washington in the Rose Bowl in 1926, tied Stanford in 1927, and defeated Washington State in 1931. His Duke team lost to Southern California in 1939, and last January was defeated by Oregon State in the transplanted Rose Bowl game at Durham.

Colonel Neyland's Tennessee Volunteers defeated Oklahoma in the 1939 Orange Bowl game at Miami, bowed to Southern California in the 1940 Rose Bowl and lost to Boston College in the 1941 Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans.

Cards Defeat Phils, 7-3, 9-4 for Charity

Explosive Hitting, Good Pitching Nets Twin Victory in Tuberculosis Benefit

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 15.—Explosive hitting combined with effective pitching today brought the Cardinals victory over the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 3, in the opener and 9 to 4 in the nightcap of a double bill played for the benefit of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

The double triumph boosted the Cards within 7½ games of the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers, who won 10 to 5 over Chicago.

Trailing, 4 to 2, in the home half of the sixth, the Cards unleashed a seven-run rally which allowed Pitcher Murry Dickson to coast in the nightcap. Johnny Hopp stole home for a Cardinal marker in the fourth inning.

Johnny Beazley, Cardinal rookie, breezed to his tenth victory of the season in the first game. Although he walked six men and yielded nine hits, three Philadelphia errors and 11 St. Louis hits kept the Birds in front all the way.

Ben Warren, Phils' catcher, hit a home run in the eighth inning of the first game with a man on base.

Donald Gives Four Hits; No Indian Reached 2d Base; Chubby Dean Loses

By the Associated Press

New York, July 15.—The resurgent New York Yankees chalked up their fourth straight victory and second successive shutout today as Atley Donald blanked the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 0, on four hits.

It was Donald's sixth success contrasted to two defeats and he was supreme throughout—keeping the Indians' quartet of singles well spaced, fanning five and walking only one. No runner reached second against him.

The Yanks shelled their old nemesis, Lefty Chubby Dean, for 10 hits, three of them by Buddy Hassett and another by Joe DiMaggio, extending his modest batting streak to 12 games.

Charley Keller, whose batting pace also has been picking up, tripled in the second inning and scored New York's first run on a single by Phil Rizzuto.

The second tally was forced across when Dean walked Joe Gordon after the Yanks had loaded the bases on singles by Donald and Hassett and an intentional pass to DiMaggio.

Hassett's third single, a double by Tom Henrich and a long fly by Gordon accounted for a run in the fifth. The final tally came in the seventh when Henrich and DiMaggio singled, each getting an extra base on a fumble by Roy Weatherly, Gordon was purposely passed, and Henrich scored on an infield out.

Union Printers Score in 9th, Beat Marines

Pitcher Baily's steady hurling after a shaky start enabled the Union Printers to stay close to Marine C. H. in a Departmental League game yesterday and win out in the last half of the ninth, 6 to 5.

Scott and Clark supplied timely hits and good fielding to the winner's cause while Nelson's three hits and seven chances without an error stood out for the Marines. Athanos also hit safely three times for the losers.

Standard Linen Beats FBI, 6-3

Rusty Kuker had one bad inning when Standard Linen made five runs to beat FBI in a Sport Center Night League game at Washington Softball Stadium, last night, 6 to 3. The Linen rally was sparked by an inside-the-park home run by Keagy. Benny Rubin was considerably off form himself and the G-Men staged a three-run rally in the sixth which threatened for a while to reach serious proportions.

Tonight at the stadium City Postoffice, the league surprise package so far, will meet Greenbelt, at 8, with FBI and Garvin's Grill meeting in the finale.

Reds Defeat Braves, 6-2, Then Lose, 7-2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 15.—After losing their tenth straight game to Cincinnati in the opener, 6-2, the Boston Braves today put together a five-run fifth inning in the nightcap to beat Paul Derringer, 7 to 2.

The big blow of the Braves' splurge in the second game was a double by Catcher Clyde Kluttz to score three runners. Two singles, a walk and Froilan Fernandez's double had already accounted for two runs in this frame. Derringer, who lost his sixth game against four victories, finished the inning, but Gene Thompson started the next.

Max Marshall homered in the sixth for the first Redleg run, and in the seventh singles by Gee Walker and Ival Goodman and a fly brought another.

Braves Score Two

The Braves also added two runs. John Cooney walked, stole second, and scored on Max West's single in the seventh, and in the ninth Tommy Holmes tripled off Clyde Shoun and came in on Cooney's bunt.

In the opening game, three Boston miscues contributed to the Reds' first three runs—one in the second and two in the third.

Boston broke their own scoring ice in the fourth when Ernie Lombardi, for 10 years the Reds' first-string catcher, poled out his seventh homer of the year—his first show of might here since he was traded last winter. The day's loudest cheers greeted the effort.

Bert Haas' error and singles by Holmes and Chet Ross netted the second tally, while the Reds clinched matters in the seventh with three runs on singles by Ray Lamanno, Walker and Frank McCormick and an outfield fly.

Dodgers Outslug Cubs In Wild Outing, 10-5

Brooklyn Raps 13 Hits, Rides Enemy Hard From Dugout; Cubs Guilty of 5 Errors

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 15.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and Chicago Cubs staged a stormy struggle for 2 hours and 37 minutes today with the Dodgers emerging from what their fans would call a "rhubarb" on the long end of a 10-to-5 count.

By any name it was a wild afternoon, with the Dodger jockeys giving Chicago hurlers a rough riding from the dugout as well as making 13 hits.

The Cubs were so unsettled that they made five errors and in the fifth inning when Hiram Bithorn was removed from the mound he threw the ball at the Brooklyn benchwarmers. The Bruins further showed their spirit by battling every step of the way, even though they were beaten to all intents and purposes when Claude Passeau was driven out of the box in the third inning.

Novikoff, Foxx Homer

When they were trailing, 5-0, in the fourth Lou Novikoff and Foxx blasted successive home runs and even in the eighth, beaten 10-3, the Cubs managed to knock out Kirby Higbe.

The Dodgers made seven hits off Passeau in his short stay. A double play held them to one run in the second when they made four singles, but they broke loose in the third. Two singles, a wild pitch and a walk loaded the bases with none out. Joe Medwick forced Dixie Walker at the plate, but Dolph Camilli, who made three hits, singled a run home and left the bases loaded.

Billy Herman walked, forcing a run across and after Passeau pitched one ball to Mickey Owen he was replaced by Bithorn. Owen hit to Stan Hack, who made a low throw to the plate to let in another run, but Bithorn pulled out of the mess.

Three errors in the fourth helped Brooklyn score again. Then in the fifth the first two Dodger batters, Owen and Peewee Reese, walked, but Bithorn almost escaped again. Owen was out at the plate trying to score from second on a wild pitch and Reese, who reached third on the play, was trapped on a bunt by Higbe. But afterward Higbe scored and Brooklyn loaded the bases on a walk, a single by Arky Vaughan and another walk. This prompted Manager Jimmy Wilson to replace not only Pitcher Bithorn but Catcher Chico Hernandez.

The first delivery of Paul Erickson was a wild pitch, letting in one run, and another tallied when Catcher Clyde McCullough retrieved the ball and made a wild throw past Erickson.

What happened from there on didn't make much difference. It was Higbe's ninth win and Passeau's sixth setback against 13 victories.

Sewell Holds Giants, Bucs Win Game, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 15.—Truett (Rip) Sewell quieted the noisy bats of the New York Giants today, holding them to six hits and scoreless till the ninth, as the Pittsburgh Pirates rang up a 6 to 2 victory.

The Giants bunched half their hits in a ninth inning rally when Johnny Mize doubled, Babe Barna walked, and Dick Bartell and Pinch Hitter Buster Maynard singled. But Sewell suppressed the uprising in time to gain his tenth victory against seven defeats.

Pittsburgh made nine hits off three pitchers, the big blow being Vince DiMaggio's double for three runs in the seventh.

The Pirates' scoring started in the third when Sewell himself doubled, Pete Coscarart walked and Johnny Barrett singled. Sewell scored on the latter hit and Coscarart also was safe at home when Catcher Harry Danning dropped Willard Marshall's throw. Al Lopex singled the other run across in the fourth.

Hughson Takes 10th In Opener, Smith Losing; Dietrich Captures Nightcap

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 15.—The Boston Red Sox and Chicago White Sox split a double bill today, Boston lambasting Edgar Smith, 10-1, in the opener and the pale hose surging back with a rash of base hits to capture the nightcap, 11-6.

Smith went the distance in the first game and was doing fairly well until the Red Sox combined hitting and two Chicago errors for a total of seven runs in the eighth inning. Until that frame they had been leading, 3-1. It was "Tex" Hughson's tenth victory of the season against three defeats; Smith was charged with his fifteenth loss of the year.

The White Sox settled the issue in the first two innings of the second game, scoring twice in the initial frame and chasing six more across in the second while shelling Charlie Wagner from the mound.

Bill Dietrich had little trouble after that although he left the game in the sixth inning after injuring his thumb. Tony Lupien, Boston first baseman, suffered a gashed forehead in the eighth inning when he fell into the Red Sox dugout while chasing a twisting foul by Mike Tresh. Manager Joe Croning finished out the string for him.

Chicago's 11-run outburst was the largest scored against Boston by any American League club this season.

Randle's Queen Pays $7.40 in Winning Hagerstown Feature

5-Year-Old Wins Fifth Of 10 Starts

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 15.—Mrs. L. E. Crowell's Randle's Queen, as consistent as they make horses, won her fifth purse in 10 tries this year in accounting for top money in the Frederick Purse, featuring the Wednesday program here. The 5-year-old daughter of Espino and Glorify, under a strong ride by Jockey Joe Cowley, led every jump of the way and held a two-lengths advantage over J. Pedrosa's Cushlamacree at the end of the 6½ furlongs. Third money went to Norman Corbin's Brazen Hussy in the field of eight.

With Cushlamacree installed the favorite, Randle's Queen paid $7.40 and was clocked in 1:20 3-5 over a fast track.

The field included plenty of speed horses and Randle's Queen, generally a "come-frombehind" plater, changed her tactics today. Cowley rushed her to the front and many believed she would stop. The mare hugged the rail, however, and was going fast at the end.

Favorite players got off on the right foot when James N. Barnes' Elizabeth K. made good in the first race. The filly was slipped through on the inside at the first turn to take command and held sway thereafter winning by four lengths over Smoke Ball with Aggressive third. Elizabeth K. paid $4.10.

R. Kidwell's Seasonal won the second event and put the finishing touches on a $46 daily double as well as bringing his individual backers a $17.10 mutuel. Navigation, the favorite, was second with Microplay third. Jockey W. Snyder rode the winner and got him up in the final jump to win by a nose in a photo.

Mrs. C. P. Miles' Hedda Gab scored a front running victory in the third race. The 3-year-old filly took command at once and was not seriously threatened at any stage. Jockey Willie Balzaretti, injured here in last Saturday's was the winning rider. Malvois and Fair Flame were closest to the $11.50 shot at the end. Jockey Carson Kirk was shut off badly aboard Casad.

Blue Delight Wins $10,000 Chicago Race

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 15.—Blue Delight, owned by Mrs. John Marsch of Chicago, became the reigning queen of Midwestern fillies and mares today after an easy triumph in the $10,000 Matron Handicap at Arlington Park.

Scoring with the same ease with which she won the Cinderella Handicap last week, the handsome 4-year-old daughter of Blue Larkspur finished three lengths in front of J. K. Houssels' Emolument, running as a field horse. Woolford Farm's Inscolassie was third and Joseph E. Widener's Waygal fourth.

Waygal and Louis B. Mayer's Painted Veil were cochoices at 3-1. Painted Veil, top weighted at 122 pounds, broke down.

Blue Delight, on the verge of being retired permanently from racing last spring, picked up a purse of $9960 after paying $9.60, $5.60 and $4.40. Emolument's prices were $12.20 and $6.20. Inscolassie paid $9.20. Time for the mile over a sloppy track was 138 2/5. Ralph Neves rode the winner.

Up to the stretch turn the race was between Miss Dogwood, Blue Delight and Waygal.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

Leeds Riely of the Charles Town official family was a visitor and said the report on the Victory meeting would be out next week. Jockey Al Bocson was injured about the legs when Smoke Ball tossed him off in the starting gate just before the first race. Walter Haight runs again today but appears to be far over his head. He might improve on a fast track and at a sprint route, but the most I think of his chances is a buck-across-the-board ticket. The stewards at Bel Air will be George Brown, jr., William L. Harron and Edward Staylor. M. C. (Ty) Shea will be the assistant racing secretary. The Brown-Harron-Shea combination will be intact again at Cumberland, I believe. Dr. Dudley King and Dr. and Mrs. J. J. McGuirk flew up from Washington for yesterday's card. A 40-minute trip in Dr. King's Fairchild. Thanks to W. N. Dobbs of Wilmington, N. C., for some nice words on the column. Received a letter from Corpl. J. N. Chamblin. He is a brother of Dan Chamblin and used to train horses. He wants to be remembered to his friends. He misses the half-milers, he writes. Too bad Sally Broadus couldn't see My One, her favorite horse, win here last Tuesday. We are rooting for her to get well quickly. This is getting to be a family column, eh? Hagerstown's sports fans are in their glory. The horses are in action at the fair grounds and their ball club, the Owls, is in first place in the Interstate League. Harry M. Manley, Mr. Big of Cumberland's racing, was a visitor yesterday. Ray Haight is tops in the secretary's office hot-foot league. He caught two yesterday morning. Only two counties in New Jersey voted against racing and one of them is where the new track is located. Good program for today. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—ROYAL FLEET has improved under Claude Feltner's training and seems capable of turning back this field of good juveniles. BUCKLE DOWN has done everything asked hereabouts and will be gunning, for three in a row. FAIR FIND is a possibility.

Second race—TECO TACK showed a good race at Charles Town and didn't have the best of racing luck. Could be the right one in this affair. JULETTE is in rare form and belongs close. FREE TONE has speed but may be troubled by that outside post position.

Third race—RED WINGS is not exactly suited by this route but may open a good lead and stagger home. LER-LIN and LITTLE MOWLEE pack stretch punch and will be ones to beat.

Fourth race—LIGHT OF MORN ran out last time. I expect no mishaps this time. TRUE STAR downed cheaper ones last out and is dangerous. ROYAL BUSINESS wants more distance but will be a stretch threat.

Fifth race—TELLEVANE and GOOD ODDS are a tight fit in this sprint. I prefer them in the order named. SILVER BEAM is getting good again and deserves some attention.

Sixth race—NYLEVE can beat these if the right chips are down. I'm going to string along. SEVENTH SAGE was a winner last out and will be a keen factor. MERRY MISTAKE to take care of the others.

Seventh race—GENDARME is the class of this field and needs only to make the turns to take the chief portion of the purse. STRUMMING was something of a champion at Charles Town. FLAMING PETEE surprised last out.

Eighth race—VESTALE deserves a chance to whip these. STREAMER'S last left nothing to be desired. DUCHESS DEL closes strongly and may be along in time to be a threat.

Best bet—LIGHT OF MORN.

Georgetown Nine Opens Summer Card, Beats Ft. Myer, 4-3

Wells Hands Soldiers 1st Loss of Year

Hoya Hurler Allows No Hits for First 6 Innings; Schwagel In Debut as Coach

Georgetown University yesterday launched its first summer baseball season in history in impressive style by handing the Fort Myer nine its first loss of the season, 4 to 3, at the Hilltop. Fort Myer holds a decision over strong Camp Lee, which has beaten Norfolk Naval Training Station.

Joe Wells, junior righthander, formerly of Eastern High here, set the soldiers down with four hits. As late as the sixth inning Wells had a no-hit shut-out in his grasp. In the sixth, however, Clayton Shaeffer scratched a single to short to become Fort Myer's first base runner, and with one out, Pitcher Earl Lindamood tripled Shaeffer home and then scored himself on an error to tie the count at 2-2.

Georgetown, which had produced its first two runs in the opening inning, came back in its half of the sixth to score another pair, enough to offset Fort Myer's final run, made in the ninth.

Lindamood fanned four, and Wells whiffed 10 in a well-played game requiring only 1 hour, 40 minutes.

Schwagel Coaches

The Hoyas, with Rome Schwagel, graduate manager of athletics making his coaching debut, wasted no time in getting to Lindamood. Outfielder Johnny Smith hit the first pitch for a single. Baker sacrificed him to second and Joe Gyrogydeak fetched him home with a grounder which "Bozie" Berger, former major league infielder playing shortstop for the soldiers, picked up and overthrew first. The second run scored on Earl Hines' double.

In the Georgetown sixth, Hines walked and stole second. Tom Costello and Danny Murphy singled, the first blow tallying Hines. Costello crossed the plate on a single by Billy Hassett, brother of the Yankees' first baseman.

Ft. Myer's last run was the product of a walk to Wagner, a single by Holman and Berger's long fly to left field. The tying run died on second, however, as Wells got Hargrove and Weimer on easy grounders.

Georgetown's next game will be with Camp Lee Saturday at the Hilltop. Bill McGurk, undefeated last spring as a freshman, will pitch for the Hoyas. He will be opposed by Hank Nowak, property of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Pro-Amateur Scheduled at Prince Georges

Al Houghton has scheduled an informal pro-amateur tournament next Monday at his Prince Georges Club to give the Maryland Open entries an opportunity for a competitive round in advance of the 36-hole championship tournament scheduled for Tuesday.

Most of the contestants in the twenty-second annual competition for the State Open crown will be on hand Monday for a trial test around the old Beaver Dam Course and Houghton, the president and professional, decided to provide competition on an off date in the pros' schedule. Each pro will be allowed three partners and a sweepstakes will be included.

The Prince Georges course, hardest hit of any in this section by the beetles, has been greatly improved by the midsummer grasses and the barren acres of a few weeks ago are now nearly ready for summer rules, according to Houghton. He intends to make the course fair for all and will not place the tees in extreme positions.

Entries for the championship event are being accepted at the State association offices, 16 McClellan Place, Baltimore, and at the host club. The entry fee is $5 for pros and $3 for amateurs with a prize list of around $250, with additional awards in war bonds and stamps to the low scoring amateurs.

The course will be open for practice to the contestants today, tomorrow and Monday. Houghton, the only four-time State Open champion, predicts a score of better than the par of 144 will be required to take down first money.

Bobby Brownell, who was developing into the finest amateur this section ever produced, until he had to desert the game, is a doubtful started due to his FBI work. The Manor Club shotmaker won the title at Elkridge last year with a record score of 69 and 67 for 136.

Leone Extends Win Streak By Flipping Hans Kampfer

1100 Watch Italian Beat German With Aid Of Japanese Leglock; McCoy Also Wins

Michele Leone kept his victory streak intact when he forced pachyderm Hans Kampfer to yelp "Enough," or something similar, after 19 minutes of the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night before 1100 fans.

As is customary, the swarthy Leone was billed as the bad man of the piece, and he turned in a better than par performance over the misbehaviour route. Not content with befuddling Wampfer with his choking, hairpulling and general cussedness, Michele even turned his ire on Referee Casey Berger, who was forced to use muscular persuasion at several stages to carry a point of procedure.

In taking the bout, Leone succeeded in further muddling the layman's picture of the Axis situation, for here was a case of an Italian defeating a German with the aid of a Japanese leglock.

Leone Not Gentle

Leone was rough from the opening whistle and stalked his foe as relentlessly as a motorist in search of gas—but with much greater success. Repeatedly, he downed Kampfer with a leglock, meanwhile warding off occasional fistic flurries by the German and ducking away from the arbiter's remonstrances.

Finally, he grabbed big Hans with something dubiously identified by authorities as a Japanese leglock, and the fellow capitulated rather than endure further agony.

Bibber McCoy, a favorite of other days, proved a show-stealer pining Abe Yourist with a body press after 24½ minutes. This presentation varied from the ordinary in that virtue did not triumph, for McCoy was a meanie of the first water and continually had the gentlemenaly Yourist fighting for his life.

Abe Floored

The denoument came when McCoy bulled his way out of a head scissors, played the ropes and bounced off fast to floor Abe for the count.

In the two-man team match Maurice La Chappelle and Johnny Melas won for the second consecutive week over Al Norcus and Angelo Savoldi, taking the second and third falls.

This was one of the fanciest dual battles of the season and Norcus and Savoldi set the stage delightfully for the addicts by winning the first fall in 12 minutes by clamping a body press on La Chappelle while Melas was picking himself out of a ringsider's lap.

The heroes took the second session in 10 minutes pinning Norcus with a body press. This occurred after Melas had held Norcus up as a target for the Frenchman's dropkicks.

The deciding fall came quick when Melas fetched Savoldi a swipe on the jaw, with La Chappelle holding. As Savoldi crumpled, the Rover boys gleefully jumped astride the prostrate hulk with a body press in four minutes.

Norcus was loathe to admit defeat and regaled the audience with eloquent pleas for justice until he was finally herded to the showers.

Texas Johnny Long won a rough opener over Jim Austeri with a series of flying head scissors in 24 minutes.

Snead Unable To Compete In Ryder Golf

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 15.—Slammin' Sammy Snead, golf siege gun who now does his firing for Uncle Sam's Navy, was scratched today from the line-up of the American Ryder Cup squad, but the way was cleared for Sergt. Jim Turnesa to compete this weekend with Walter Hagen's challengers in the Red Cross relief match expected to raise $25,000.

Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament chairman, said that Snead had been unable to arrange leave from the Norfolk, Va., base where he is in training and would miss a cup match for the first time in five years. Snead's place will be filled by Big Ed Dudley, with Turnesa, runner-up to Snead in the National P. G. A. Championship, replacing Dudley on the challenge squad.

Corcoran also disclosed that Hagen had left for Rochester, N. Y., where his father, William Hagen, is seriously ill. He said the Haig is expected to return in time to lead the challengers in four-ball play Saturday. Individual matches are scheduled Sunday.

Hagen has received permission from Craig Wood, cup captain, to play 18 holes of foursome competition, turning the other half over to Al Watrous, host pro at the Oakland Hills course where the match will be held.

Davie Johnsen Leads Advance In M. A. Tennis

Davie Johnsen, cleverly mixing drives and drop shots, yesterday removed dark horse Frank Thompson from the Middle Atlantic tennis championships at Columbia, winning a quarter-finals match, 6—3, 6—4.

Johnsen, seeded No. 2, and the unseeded Thompson, a former University of Virginia captain, played in a hastily arranged match, which was originally scheduled for today. Thompson, who had upset eighth-ranked Buddy Adair in the fourth round, never had a chance with Johnsen and held only one lead in the two sets; that was at 2—1 in the second. Most of Thompson's points were gained at the net, but in face of Johnsen's speed he was unable to attain that spot often. In the only other match played yesterday, Doyle Royal and Bobby Bensinger gained the doubles semifinals with a 7—5, 6—1 victory over Igor Cassini and Herb Shenkin.

Today's schedule lists two quarter-finals singles and one quarter-finals doubles. In singles Defending Champion Barney Welsh plays the 18-year-old Bensinger at 5:30 and fourth-seeded Hugh Lynch meets fifth-ranked Dick Murphy at 6. The doubles at 6:30 brings together Don Leavens and Johnsen, seeded second, and Bud Chandler and F. A. Smart. The remaining singles quarter-finals between second-seeded Don Leavens and fifth-seeded Charley Channing will be played Friday.

Mrs. Bailey Wins Tourney At Washington

Mrs. George H. Bailey, jr., came back with an 85 in the second and final round of the Muncaster Cup tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, best round of the 36-hole affair by the entire field, and won the annual intra-club competition with a net score of 156.

Mrs. Bailey, a former women's club champion, opened with an 89 on Tuesday and after her 85 of yesterday deducted an eight handicap from each round to win the cup by a four stroke margin.

Mrs. R. E. Hotze, first day's leader with an 88-12—76, went up to 96-12—84, yesterday and finished second with a net count of 160.

Mrs. Bailey won both net and gross honors but as she could accept but one prize low gross went to the defendin champion, Mrs. Lafayette Franklin, who was consistent with 90 and 91 for 181. Mrs. Franklin's 161 net count missed a tie for her title by five shots.

Mrs. Harold Willey was low net winner in the second flight with 103-98 and a combined handicap of 46 for 155. Mrs. R. F. Nicholson was second with 99-99, 38, 160.

Mrs. T. S. O'Halloran won the third flight with 113-111, 58, 166, with second to Mrs. L. E. Hutchison, 113-115, 56, 172.

Mrs. William Wise Wins Kenwood Golf

Mrs. William H. Wise won the tee-to-green event of the Kenwood women's golf committee yesterday, taking just 45 strokes to reach the greens and deducting three handicap strokes for a net 42. Mrs. J. H. Bullock had low putts, 29.

Guest prize in the tee-to-green strokes competition went to Mrs. O. M. Reed, Congressional, with 66-8, 58.

Hudson vs. Trucks In Tonight's Game

He will have as his pitching opponent Virgil Trucks, fast-balling right-hander of the Tigers.

Manager Bucky Harris, pleased with Roy Cullenbine's performance at third base last night, indicated that the former outfielder would play the position for the remainder of the season.

Tomorrow, the Nats introduce twilight baseball to Washington, taking the field against the Tigers at 7 p. m.

when Jake Early drew a walk, and he was in trouble when Johnny Sullivan, hitless to that point, banged a single to right that moved Early to second. The count was two balls and one strike on Pofahl when he singled solidly into center field to score Early and break up the ball game.

Three times previously the Nats gave Wynn one-run leads he was unable to hold. He never gave up more than a single run in any inning, however, despite the Tigers' 15 hits. The Nats made 12 hits off Bridges and White.

The Tigers came within a fraction of a foot of taking the lead in their half of the eleventh when they almost got a run home on a double steal. After getting two out, Wynn was slugged for a triple to center by the former Nat, Doc Cramer, and then issued a walk to York. The Tigers attempted to put a double steal in motion with York sprinting for second while Wynn held the ball, but the young pitcher finally aroused himself, rifled a short throw to Sullivan and Cramer was thrown out at the plate when he attempted to move home on the play.

Back in the tenth Wynn was faced with more trouble when Bloodworth led off with a single to center but he struck out Parsons and the pitch was converted into a double play when Bloodworth was caught stealing on the third strike.

The Nats introduced Roy Cullenbine to the Griffith Stadium customers as a third baseman last night, and Cullenbine, an outfielder by trade, contributed the game's two fielding features. He knocked down a third-inning grounder off Hitchcock's bat for a force play, and in the eighth, he averted trouble for Wynn with a fancy stop on Bloodworth's hot smash.

Wynn was given a 1-0 lead to work with in the first inning when Case, Spence and Cullenbine slugged singles against Bridges but the Tigers tied the score in the fourth. They did it simply, with Harris and Higgins swatting doubles to center field.

In the fifth Wynn got himself a run and 2-1 lead. He drew a walk from Bridges and moved to third on Case's single to center. When Bloodworth ran into center field for Spence's short fly, Wynn sprinted home after the catch, beating the throw by a trifling margin.

The Tigers moved abreast at 3-3 again in the seventh when singles by York and Harris scored McCosky who had previously singled, but in their own half of the inning, the Nats got that run back.

Pofahl, who was certainly the night's hero, scored the seventh inning run after leading off with a single and stealing second. With two out, Spence singled to center to score him.

Wynn beat back trouble in the eighth after Tebbetts beat out a bunt with one out and Pinchhitter Gehringer drew a walk. Sullivan and Pofahl handled Hitchcock's grounder for a double play in that crisis.

Wynn couldn't hold his 3-2 lead in the ninth. He invited trouble by walking McCosky, who promptly stole second. Cramer flied out, but York tied the score for the Tigers with a single to center. In the tenth and eleventh, well, you just know what happened.

Sleuths Hit Timely, Beat Terp Nine, 10-6

Making good use of its seven hits the FBI nine defeated the University of Maryland team, 10 to 6, in the first summer exhibition baseball game at College Park yesterday.

Maryland sophomore subs blew the game in the seventh, commiting five errors that resulted in a six-run FBI rally.

The Maryland team will play Lieut. "Boze" Berger's Ft. Myer team at 3 p. m. Saturday on the College Park diamond.

War Industries Hardest Hit by New Tax Plans

War industries would be the hardest hit by the House Ways and Means Committee's latest tax proposals, it was pointed out in financial circles yesterday.

While the excess profits tax would be lowered from 94 per cent, originally proposed, to 87.5 per cent, the normal and surtax rates would be advanced from 40 to 43 per cent.

In many cases, the Wall Street Journal asserted, the aggregate tax burden would amount to 25 per cent of taxable income, leaving small profits available for stockholders.

Application of the proposed new taxes to General Electric's 1941 earnings would have lopped $1 a share off the net profit of that major industrial corporation, which would have earned 98 cents a share instead of $1.98 actually realized.

Bethlehem Steel's net profitfi on the basis of the proposed taxes would have been $3.75 instead of $6.35 actually reported. The proposed taxes would have cut Revere Copper and Brass earnings from $2.64 to 65 cents a common share. American Can earnings would have dropped from $6.45 to $3.67 a common share.

Leaky Steampipe Started Hardboard Industry, Now Important Factor in War Material Output

New York, July 15.—Today tanks and planes are getting material discovered accidentally by a scientist who went out to lunch without knowing he had left a leaky steampipe behind him.

What the scientist found when he returned led to the development of wood fiber boards by the Masonite Corp., whose huge Southern plant now is working around the clock to meet war needs.

This is in addition to its civilian uses for refrigerator exteriors, filing cabinets, housing, grain storage bins, motor housings, fan blades, concrete molds, stationary awnings and office furniture.

Executives of the United States Gypsum Co., holding a separate patent for hardboards, say their company's product, too, is being used for war purposes in addition to its civilian uses.

Unlike some other industries, the hardboard makers so far have been confronted neither with shortages nor priorities in raw materials since they use small pine and hardwood trees.

The Masonite plant, whose capacity recently was enlarged 33 per cent, employs thousands of workers, and officials say its daily production exceeds a million square feet.

The Gypsum Co. has plants both in the South and in New England.

The scientist, the late William H. Mason, who had been vice president of the Masonite firm in charge of research and later its president, made his discovery at Laurel, Miss., in 1924. Working with him in the development of the process was Charles M. Westphalen, now the company's production manager.

Mason had worked with Thomas A. Edison 17 years and went to Laurel to experiment with the by-products of Southern lumber mills, whose trash burners were devouring hundreds of tons of small, odd-size pieces of lumber.

Mason was looking for some use for that left-over wood, so he searched for a process by which the wood could be reduced to fiber without destroying the natural lignin holding all wood together.

Such a process, he thought, would result in a strong, tough paper or perhaps a new kind of insulating board.

He decided to cut the waste into small chips and explode them under pressure.

Drilling a hole in a steel shaft, he made an industrial "gun" which was charged with chips and water. The end was sealed with a tapered steel plug.

Blow torches were applied to the bottom of the gun until the pressure within had reached 600 pounds per square inch. The plug, jarred loose by an iron bar, shot out with such speed it never was found, but with it came a mass of fine wood fibers.

Then Mason mixed a "wet lap" of fiber and water he tried to press into a flat mass that might be baked hard in an oven, the hardness, of course, being the central idea.

That experiment failed. He tried to squeeze the wet lap between steam-heated platens of a small latter press. This also was unsuccessful until the accident happened.

In the midst of one of his experiments, Mason went out to lunch, carefully turning off the steam, but leaving a portion of the wet lap in the press.

When he returned two hours later he was astonished to find that not only had a steam pipe been leaking, but that within the two hours the wet lap had become a hard, grainless board.

Within three years the Masonite Corporation had set up its plant at Laurel, in the midst of Mississippi pineland, where the raw materials were close at hand.

House Action On Parity Bill Drops Grains

By the Associated Press

Grain futures declined yesterday after the House yielded to the revised farm appropriation bill calling for the sale of wheat at prices below parity but cotton closed higher as traders interpreted the action as a boost for 100 per cent of parity prospects for other major commodities.

New York cotton finished 55 to 90 cents a bale higher in a wave of last hour commission house and local buying. Wool tops declined .4 of a cent a pound.

House approval of the Senate's bill meant that 125 million bushels of wheat could be sold for feeding purposes at not less than about 83 cents a bushel and wheat finished with losses of ⅛ to ½ of a cent a bushel. Corn was unchanged to ⅛ cent lower.

Chicago hogs advanced 10 to 15 cents a hundredweight to a top of $14.90, within 10 cents of the 16-year peak. Cattle generally showed gains of from 10 to 25 cents and spring lambs were steady.

Free Wheat Under Kansas City Embargo

Kansas City, July 15 (AP).—The Kansas City Board of Trade placed a modified embargo on shipments of free wheat to its market because storage space was exhausted.

Under the action, effective at midnight, every car of wheat shipped here must first be granted a permit by the board to prevent congestion. The market has been operating under a permit system on all storage grain since June 5.

Restriction on free wheat—wheat sold on the open market—had been expected for over a week as the market, buoyed by the new crop, gradually filled up.

WPB Opens Conference Here On Inventory Control Problem

By the Associated Press

Renewing its assurances that it has no ready-made plans for regulating retail and wholesale merchants' inventories, the War Production Board yesterday opened a series of meetings to consult with retailers and wholesalers on the problem of inventory control.

Meetings are being conducted informally by the newly created wholesale and retail inventory policy committee, headed by Eaton V. W. Read.

Dealers in Southern Atlantic States have been invited to attend the Washington meetings which will continue through Friday; dealers in Middle Atlantic and New England States will attend conferences in New York July 22, 23 and 24; those in Western areas will attend meetings in Chicago, July 27 and 28, and any dealers unable to attend these gatherings will have opportunity to attend a conference on July 29 in Pittsburgh or may submit their views in writing.

"I wan to emphasize that no plan exists in the War Production Board today for wholesale and retail inventory control," Read said. "Naturally, we want the views of every person who desires to submit them.

"The idea of this series of conferences is to give WPB a cross-section view of the inventory problem. We want to discuss this problem with the men and women most concerned with it. If inventory control is necessary, these men and women will tell us about it.

"We intend to devote three weeks to this study of individual problems, while our statistical experts in Washington continue their study of the entire wholesale and retail inventory situation."

The committee was organized recently after a premature WPB announcement of proposed restrictions on swollen inventories caused vigorous protests from trade associations. It has been asked to bring in a report and recommendation to Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of civilian supply, within six weeks.

On the committee besides Read are Irwin D. Wolf of Pittsburgh, who is specializing in the retail field, and John A. Donaldson of Chicago, who is handling the wholesale study.

Oil to Coal Conversions At Low Rate

By the Associated Press

New York, July 15.—Coal interests said today a survey had disclosed that home owners in the Eastern States affected by oil rationing virtually had ignored repeated Governmetn warnings to convert oil burners to coal units where possible.

Of nearly 750 fuel dealers canvassed, from New England to Maryland, an average of only 2.9 conversions had been made thus far, and the purchase of coal grates for later conversion had averaged 2.3 per dealer, it was shown by the survey. The average dealer has had but nine requests for information concerning conversion.

It was estimated that there were 1,250,000 oil-burning homes in the affected area.

The survey showed that nearly 500 large dealers had notified their customers they would be unable to get 100 per cent of their requirements. The remainder of the total canvassed had not yet taken any definite action along the line, it was said.

The dealers expressed the belief, in general, that consumers would gamble on keeping reasonably warm with fuel oil unless there was a more direct statement from the Government containing specific information on the supply prospects for the winter.

Fuel Oil Supplies Rise, Gasoline Off

New York, July 16 (AP).—Stores of gasoline in the United States continued to decline for the week ended July 11, the American Petroleum Institute reported today. Fuel oil supplies, however, rose slightly.

Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline at the end of the week totaled 85,658,000 barrels, a decline of 1,356,000 from the 87,014,000 reported the previous week.

Residual fuel oil supplies increased by 988,000 barrels to 77,891,000 and gas oil and distillates (light fuels) increased 898,000 barrels to 34,418,000.

Daily average crude oil production for the week was 3,657,400 barreds, an increase of 360,250 from the previous week.

Refineries operated at 76.5 per cent of capacity, indicating a crude run averaging 3,582,000 barrels daily compared with 75.8 and 3,551,000 in the previous week.

Gasoline production for the week was estimated at 10,675,000 barrels compared with 10,959,000 last week.

Week's Power Output Increases Slightly

New York, July 15 (AP).—The Edison Electric Institute reported today electric energy production in the week ended July 11 totaled 3,428,916,000 kilowatt hours, a slight increase from the previous week and 7.9 per cent more than in the comparable 1941 week.

A week earlier the total was 3,424,188,000 kilowatt hours and in the 1941 week production was 3,178,054,000 kilowatt hours.

War Program Cost Now Put At 223 Billion

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board reported yesterday that appropriations approved and proposed for carrying on the war program total approximately 223 billion dollars.

Appropriation and contract authorizations as of yesterday amounted to 212 billion dollars, WPB said.

The Naval Construction Act, authorizing the construction of about $8,550,000,000 of additional naval tonnage, was approved by the President on July 9, but did not carry any specific appropriation of funds.

In addition, about $2,180,000,000 for other war agencies has been requested. Of this amount, 314 million dollars has been appropriated and expenditure of the balance is provided for in pending legislation.

During the first two years of the war effort, ended June 30, Federal expenditures for military purposes totaled $34,785,000,000, including disbursements by the Treasury and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Of the total, $15,650,000,000 went to the Army, $10,211,000,000 to the Navy, and $4,098,000,000 for the Lend-Lease Administration.

Approximately 45,000 electric cooking stoves, held in stock by dealers and distributors since May 2 were released by the War Production Board yesterday for restricted sale to the public.

All stoves held by dealers, as well as ranges having a factory sales value of $80 or more in the hands of distributors and manufacturers, may be sold. Stoves valued at less than $80 remain frozen in stocks of distributors and manufacturers for use by war agencies or for defense housing projects.

To purchase a new electric stove, a customer must certify to a dealer in writing that the range is required to replace one now unserviceable, or that no other cooking equipment is available. The customer also must show that necessary wiring and electric facilities have been installed.

A prediction that the Nation's shipyards will be able to produce at least 25,000,000 deadweight tons of merchant ships in 1943—"even more if necessary"—came yesterday from Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, supervisor of the Maritime Commission's construction program.

"The ceiling on potential construction will be established by availability of materials—particularly steel—rather than by shipyard capacity," Vickery said in a statement.

"We will build all the ships for which we can get material. In fact I have no assurance we can get enough steel next year to keep all the yards operating at peak production levels."

President Roosevelt's goal for 1942-'43 is 23 million deadweight tons of merchant shipping. This year's goal is eight million deadweight tons, and Vickery has expressed confidence that it can be reached.

Tire dealers westerday were granted a 10-day extension of time—until July 25—for filing inventory reports with local rationing and war price boards.

The reports are to show all serviceable tires and tubes, whether new, used, retreaded or recapped, which were in the seller's stock as of June 30. The extension beyond the original July 15 deadline was intended, the Office of Price Administration said, to give dealers extra time to fill out the "new and unfamiliar" forms.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—Selling swept through the wheat pit today after the House agreed to legislation permitting sale of Government wheat for livestock feeding at below parity prices.

The liquidation, however, dried up quickly, and reentry of buyers pushed quotations to levels only fractionally under the preceding session's close. Other grains followed wheat, breaking in jittery trade, and then recovering quickly at the close.

Wheat finished ⅞ to 1⅛ lower. July, $1.19¾; September, $1.21¾-$1.21⅝; corn was unchanged to ⅛ down; July, 88¾; September, 90¼. Oats closed ⅛ higher; rye gained ½ to ¾, and soybeans were ⅛ lower to ¾ higher.

Action of the House was something of a surprise to traders, many of whom expected the socalled compromise proposal, offering wheat for sale at corn parity, would be adopted. The compromise proposal would have meant sales at about 97 cents a bushel.

Stocks Close Little Changed After Early Rise Is Washed Out; Buying Interest at Low Ebb

New York, July 15.—The stock market encountered a little resistance today after a first hour climb to around the best average levels since early March.

Some of the early gains were held and others were washed out as buying interest waned. Wall Street worries over taxes and Nazi army's pressure on the Russians produced no burdensome feeling at any time.

Such leaders as U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, duPont, Westinghouse and Standard Oil (N. J.) finished with moderate losses. American Can, Douglas Aircraft, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, American Telephone closed fractions to a point or more higher.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was unchanged at 37.2. Transfers totaled 385,480 shares compared with 372,650 Tuesday.

The financial sector remained inflation-conscious as brokerage and investment advisory channels put out more comment on the likely influence of changes in the general price structure.

In this connection commodity price movements were closely watched, especially after Washington reports disclosed that the House had broken its long deadlock on the Agricultural Department appropriation bill by agreeing to a Senate proposal to allow sales of Government-owned wheat at prices below parity. Chicago wheat was relatively steady in the face of this event and cotton futures moved up sharply at the end.

The bread cereal closed ¼ to ⅛ of a cent a bushel off and corn was unchanged to ⅛ cent down. Hogs rose 10 to 15 cents. Cotton, down most of the day, finished 55 to 90 cents a bale advanced.

In the Curb market better prices were established by Lake Shore Mines, Electric Bond & Share, American Light & Traction, New Jersey Zinc and Sherwin Williams. Off a bit were American Cyanamid, Glen Alden Coal and Columbia Oil & Gasoline. Bell Telephone of Canada dropped 3 points on an odd lot trade. Transactions here were 53,325 shares against yesterday's 54,738.

Sales of F and G War Bonds Spurt In First July Week

By the Associated Press

The Treasury said yesterday that sales of "F" and "G" war bonds increased sharply in the first week of July.

Part of the increase was attributed to the fact that the limit on purchases of these types of bonds was increased on July 1 from $50,000 to $100,000 a year, enabling some large investors who had already bought their $50,000 limit to buy more.

With slight differences, these bonds are similar to the Series E war bonds generally purchased by small investors.

In the first 11 days of the month sales of all three series of war bonds

Listen!
with Glynn
(By Clyde Hunt, WJSV Chief Engineer, for Paul Glynn, now vacationing).

Getting out ballyhoo on stunt broadcasts is about a thing of the past, and lest we forget the troubles that go on behind the scenes of special event programs, it might be well to throw in a thought along this line, as I believe it helps the listener get a better picture of what he hears.

For example, the "Spirit of '42" program on CBS from Langley Field, Hampton, Va., Sunday a week ago. Part of this origination was from a Flying Fortress over the Atlantic on its regular patrol route. Five engineers from WJSV spent two 15-hour days at Langley Field, installing antennas, transmitters and receivers on the ground and in the Flying Fortress so that Columbia could bring you a 10-minute interview by John Charles Daly. Daly roamed the length of the big bomber asking each crew member what his job was during normal flight and in battle.

This was just a 10-minute portion of the half-hour show and may have seemed to listeners like a colorful and interesting, but nevertheless incidental, part of the entire program. The work behind such programs is rarely ever mentioned on the air these days.

"We, the People" will have a part origination from Fort Belvoir next Sunday night, a two-way conversation between headquarters and a tank in action. It would be fun to listen to your comments and opinions after hearing this program. About nine-tenths of you would say, "That certainly was interesting—an announcer just steps into a tank and talks." But who ever thinks of the behind-the-scenes men when they go to the theater.

Contract Bridge

Another contributor, J. A. L., wishes to know his correct rebid after his partner has responded to a take-out double. He held this hand, sitting South:

♠ K J 3
♡ A K 7 6
◇ K 9
♣ A Q J 8

The bidding went:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Double	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

"I was pretty sure that my rebid should be in hearts," he writes, "but how many hearts—two, three or four—was what troubled me. How many would you say?"

We'd pick the one in the middle and say three hearts. In this situation South should realize that he has forced his partner to bid and North may have a very weak hand; but with four and a half plus high-card tricks and a doubleton, South sees that game is possible and so he can make a jump raise.

Two hearts is too weak a rebid, while four hearts is too optimistic. J. A. L. must be prepared to have the hand played at four hearts, even with his partner holding a trickless hand, before he can jump to game.

SIMMONS "DREAMSLEEP" MATTRESS

SPECIALLY PRICED

ONLY DURING THE

HALF YEARLY SALE

MATCHING BOX SPRING . . . 22.99

✓NOTE THE PRICE . . . so sweet and low you won't lose a wink of sleep over it. Now you War Brides needn't put up with "second-best" bedding when you move into your brand new house. Now you War Workers can afford the mattress that will afford you the deep sweet sleep you simply must have to keep you in the "pink." It's only 22.99 for that dream of a mattress . . . our famous Simmons "Dreamsleep" which takes a price cut only during our Half Yearly Sale of Furniture and Homewares.

✓NOTE THE DEEP COILS . . . 240 of them in the double size . . . and all have gone to extremes. They've been put through a blazing furnace. They've been dipped into an arctic cold bath. And now they buoy up your body as gently as water does when you float . . . support it on an even keel no matter how often you turn in the night. And they won't sag . . . won't shift out of place . . . won't creak or groan with age. No wonder even insomniacs drift off to blissful slumber on a "Dreamsleep."

✓NOTE THE SISAL PADDING . . . the tough-as-nail white fibre stitched for greater firmness and to do away with any crunch-y sound. It's a buffer . . . prevents the spring-y coils from cutting through the thick cushion of cotton felt that makes you feel as if you were sleeping on a cloud. Just a technical detail . . . but one of the "reasons why" your "Dreamsleep" will cradle your weary limbs for years to come.

✓NOTE THE INNER-ROLL EDGE . . . the bulwark for the edge of your mattress. Makes it firmer and more durable. Helps keep it from sagging. What is it? It's that wonderful thick cotton rope attached to the coil unit with metal clips. You find it only on the better mattresses. So, of course, you find it on a Simmons "Dreamsleep."

✓NOTE THE PRE-BUILT BORDER . . . the Chinese wall that gives your "Dreamsleep" its trim shapeliness. Even keeps it from drooping if your husband is a confirmed bed-sitter. It's made independently of the mattress . . . stitched on to the French Inner-Roll . . . and bound with French tape for beauty as well as practical reasons.

✓NOTE THE VENTILATORS AND HANDLES . . . and pardon us for going into such detail. The 4 screened ventilators inhale the sweet, clean air, exhale the stale air . . . and help keep your mattress linen-fresh the year 'round. Save you the trouble of frequent sunning and airing. And as for the four securely anchored handles . . . they're all for your convenience. Make it easier to turn your "Dreamsleep."

✓NOTE THE BOX SPRING . . . the other half of this comfort team. Perfect twin to the "Dreamsleep" mattress. Match them up in cotton damask or in striped woven cotton ticking in blue-and-orange and beige-and-tan . . . in single, double and three-quarter sizes. For absolute comfort we recommend this Dreamsleep Box Spring as the perfect accompaniment to the Dreamsleep mattress,
